State to Drop Lyddane Case If Alleged Aid Is Acquitted

Court Ruling in Trial of Boland as Conspirator Expected Today.

Held in Contempt, 4 Told to Appear

Woman Will Be Re-tried if Man Is Found Guilty By Court.

The ultimate fate of Mrs. Anne Lyddane probably will be known late today.

Whether the blonde Rockville bank employe will be freed or re-tried on a charge of plotting to kill her husband, Francis, hinges on the verdict of the judges who tried John M. "Gambler Jack" Boland, her alleged co-conspirator.

Their verdict in the Boland trial is expected to be announced late today in Rockville courthouse. Upon their decision, State's Attorney James H. Pugh said, will depend the action of his office in either re-trying or abandoning the prosecution.

The belief that the judge's decision would be made today was predicated on the supposition that the court is desirous of entering an early verdict.

Verdict Due Before Thursday.

Chief Justice Hammond Urner will be engaged in Frederick this morning, and on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will sit on the Court of Appeals bench in Annapolis.

In a trial by judges, instead of by a jury, which was chosen by Boland, it is necessary that all judges be present. It was considered only a remote possibility that the verdict would be handed down later than Thursday.

The prosecution of the alleged co-conspirators, Harry Thomas and John H. "Googy" Carnell, also will depend upon the court's verdict in the Boland case. Fred A. Maliby, the attorney who defended Boland, had not been notified last night as to when he might expect the verdict.

Jury Discharged.

The jury which tried Mrs. Lyddane at the Rockville courthouse was discharged after it had been deadlocked for nine hours, with the jurors at an impasse. When the jurors were dismissed, they were tied six to six.

Pugh refrained from comment on the possibility of abandoning the prosecution of Mrs. Lyddane and her alleged co-conspirators, because of the inability of the jury to agree. All future action, he said, will be contingent upon the disposition of the Boland case.

All the defense attorneys were resting today after their arduous labors in court. No plans are contemplated by Stedman Prescott, Kenneth Lyddane or Robert B. Peter, defense attorneys, for termination of the prosecution. Any abandonment of the case is discretionary with the State's attorney, it was explained.

Four Washington Herald newspaper men have been cited to appear before the Circuit Court today to show cause why they should not be held in contempt because of the publication of what purported to be the court's verdict in the Boland case.

Inmates of Asylum Make Futile Break

4 Men With Knives Battle Guards 20 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

Waupun, Wis., June 16.—Four inmates made a futile attempt to escape from the Central State Hospital for the Criminal Insane today, using knives and an ice pick in a 20 minute battle with guards before they were subdued.

No one was seriously injured, Dr. W. A. Deerhake, superintendent of the institution, said.

The break was made shortly after breakfast, and was led by Andrew Gilling, 20, Green Bay, Wis., who, with three others, rushed William H. Harterink, 25-year-old turnkey, in an effort to reach the outer gate.

With Gilling were Lowell Tietz, 26, of Minneapolis; Delmar Lattimer, 33, of Superior, Wis., and Herbert Cooper, of Cuthbert, S. Dak. Gilling obtained an ice pick and three knives from the pantry where he was employed and distributed them among the quartet. Though the guards summoned by the turnkey were not armed, they succeeded in subduing the four after a short tussle.

Newark Fire Routs Many.

Newark, N. J., June 16 (AP).—Dozens of persons were driven to the streets in night clothes and eight were injured early today when fire swept a six-story brick apartment house at Broad and Gouverneur streets. Fire department officials estimate damage at between $75,000 and $100,000. They said the blaze started in a dumb waiter shaft.

D. C. Flier Sets World Marks In Midget Ship

King Brings U. S. Even With France in Number of Air Records.

The United States moved into a tie with France yesterday in the number of world's aviation records held when Benjamin King, Washington sportsman pilot, flew his little Aeronca seaplane from North Beach, Long Island, to Whitneys Landing, 12 miles from Annapolis.

His flight, setting two national and two international distance marks for light seaplanes, brought this country's total records to 43. After refueling at Whitneys Landing, King flew the ship to the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

The previous distance record for light seaplanes, set by the French flyers Lallouette and Albert, was 76,155 miles. King, taking off from North Beach, Long Isinad, a few minutes before noon yesterday, flew approximately 200 miles on less than eight gallons of gas before landing shortly after 4:30 p. m. He and his companion, Dan Brimm, of Port Washington, Long Island, had hoped to reach Washington. A head wind from Philadelphia on forced them to use so much gas they decided to play safe and bring the ship down near Annapolis.

Bucked Headwind.

The Aeronca's gas tank holds only eight gallons. After it was refueled at Whitney's Landing the pilot learned he would have had enough to bring him on to Washington as the head wind had died down.

A speed of 70 miles per hour was maintained most of the trip. The little seaplane's motor, only 36 horsepower, is capable of making 80 miles, King said yesterday. The Aeronca, weighing less than 770 pounds, falls into two seaplane classes, the first and third categories. Those in the first category weight 1,440 pounds or less. Those in the third weigh 770 pounds or less. King's flight yesterday set records for both.

Almost from the moment a telephone call from King informed the Naval Air Station of his successful landing near Annapolis, Mrs. King and a group of friends, waiting for him at the station, began to scan the sky. As he circled over the feathery waters before easing his plane into the wavelets he was welcomed with a furious waving of handkerchiefs, scarfs and arms.

"Where in the world did you get that hat?" were Mrs. King's first words to her husband as he stepped jauntily out of the cockpit. On his head was a yachtsman's cap.

Brimm, also a sportsman pilot, climbed out after King and joined the merry little reception. The two men had sat side by side all the way from North Beach, there being only one seat in the Aeronca.

After he had been as affectionately welcomed by his wife and friends "as if he had flown around the world"—Mrs. King's own words—King returned to the seaplane

Duce Terms Warfare Vital To New Italy

'Nation of Soldiers' Is Urged as Ethiopia Clash Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 16.—Premier Mussolini told 7,000 war veterans today "soldiers always prefer action to words and we are a nation of soldiers."

The destiny of modern Rome, he declared, may well be equal in greatness to that of ancient Rome.

He spoke briefly from the Coliseum, imposing monument of the time when the city ruled all of the known world, to a reunion of grenadiers.

The dictator gave as one of the reasons for the brevity of his address the fact that "matters of great importance to the nation are yet in a state of flux."

"These stones," he said, pointing to the massive blocks of the coliseum, "are eloquent of the greatness of Rome, achieved through the force of her arms and the wisdom of her laws. Nothing prevents us from believing that the destinies of yesterday will not be those of tomorrow."

War Imminent.

As Il Duce spoke Italy marshaled her financial and economic resources, as well as her man power, for a war with Ethiopia, which almost the entire nation believes will break out in the autumn, after the rainy season.

All silver money circulating throughout the kingdom has been ordered turned into the treasury so that the metal may be used in Italy's East African colonies, where silver is the medium of exchange. It is also used in Ethiopia.

Arbitration proceedings designed to settle the boundary dispute between Rome and the African kingdom are now at a virtual standstill, and the sending of war materials and workmen to Africa has been speeded up. No fewer than four ships sailed from Naples yesterday for the colonies.

Speed Necessary.

One reason for the "high pressure" i sthat Italy would like to have her full expeditionary force of around 223,000 men in Africa by August 25, when the time limit set by the League of Nations for the arbitration commission to deal with the dispute expires.

The commission, one of whose members is an American, Benjamin Pitman Potter, is scheduled to meet again June 25 in The Netherlands.

The silver decree issued last night makes it illegal for any citizen to possess silver money after a date to be set by the minister of finance, under the penalty of a severe fine. Previously the export of silver in any form had been forbidden.

5 Stand in Boat—2 Dead, 3 Escape

Man Rented Party Craft With Cork in Hole.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 16.—Five musicians stood up in a boat today to play for other members of a Brooklyn social club who were on an outing in Jamaica Bay. The rowboat overturned.

Henry Catalado, 26, and Albert Delisalo, 34, drowned. Margo Delissio, brother of Albert, and Joseph Desimone, swam the 60 feet to shore. Dominick Desimone, brother of Joseph, was rescued by three policemen who, doing pier duty, dove into the water at the first cries for help.

Tony Caruso, 65, who rented the boat to the five men, was held for questioning after police said they found a hole, one inch in diameter, in the bottom of the boat. The hole was stopped up with a soda bottle cork.

Caruso said he had given the men a large can to bail out the boat in case of a leak.

After questioning Caruso for three hours, Assistant District Attorney di Giovanni found there was no negligence on the boatman's part and released him.

French Aviator Held for Selling Army Photos to Spy Syndicate

By the Associated Press.

Toulon, France, June 16.—Riviera police hunted for a mysterious "blond with green eyes" today while secret government agents questioned a young naval aviator charged with selling military photographs to a spy ring.

Aviator Rolland, attached to the Hyeras air base, was caught in a police trap. He refused to explain a packet of six aerial photographs of the Toulon base which authorities said he turned over to a ring led by the blonde.

Military and naval authorities were secretive while the search for the missing girl was under way.

After Rolland's arrest police raided an apartment near the waterfront which had been transformed into a photographic laboratory. The lone occupant was arrested, but his name and occupation were not disclosed.

The commandment of the Toulon military base broke the official silence with the brief statement that the most valuable photographs of France's southern bases and camps are still safe in the headquarters and that Rolland's photos "are not vitally important."

A trap set for the ring early today failed to bag the blonde, who outdistanced her pursuers in the car and escaped in the direction of the Italian border.

Hoover Calls Security Plan Liberty Peril

Hits 'Hothouse Methods,' 'Scarcity' Economy in Stanford Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Stanford University, Calif., June 16.—Another warning against any sacrifice of freedom in the search for economic security was sounded here today by former President Herbert Hoover.

Caustic references to "hothouse methods" of restoring social growth, to "the economy of scarcity" and to bureaucracy were made by Mr. Hoover in addressing the 1935 graduating class of Stanford, his alma mater.

In reference to the prevalence of individualism at the time of his own graduation in 1898, Mr. Hoover said he spoke "at the risk of seeming counter-revolutionary or as a defender of evil."

Hits Power Concentration.

"Government by specific laws, not by the uncertainties of administrative fiat," was one tenet put forth by the former President.

"The concentration of economic power and the concentration of political power are equally destructive," he remarked.

"There never has been nor never will be freedom when powers of government are lodged in a man or in a group of men," he added. "Moreover, all history teaches us that even majorities cannot be trusted with the ark of freedom without checks. Constitutional government, the division of powers, are the only successful protections the human race has devised. To transgress or override them will weaken and finally destroy freedom itself."

Only a few days prior to the recent Supreme Court decision that brought death to the Blue Eagle, Mr. Hoover in an interview advocated abolition of the NRA.

Hits Cult of Leisure.

"Social security," he told the graduates, "must be builded upon a cult of work, not a cult of leisure. The judgment has not yet been reversed. That proscription was for his better health and life. * * *"

"Social security," he said at another point, "can not be had by sudden inspiration of panaceas. There are no short cuts. Permanent social growths can not be had by hothouse methods. * * *"

"The functioning of any economic system is peculiarly based on faith in the future and confidence in certain constants of life. * * * They are not only liberty in the broad sense but these constants include the detail of sanctity of contracts which are not unconscionable; the stability of the currency and credit; the maintenance of legitimate competition; government by specific laws, not by the uncertainties of administrative fiat."

In the same stadium where in 1928 he accepted the Republican nomination with an expression of hope that poverty soon would be banished from the earth, Mr. Hoover told the 1,000 graduates this country had "somewhat less than a quarter" of the people for whom protection must be provided.

Hits NRA.

"But let us not forget the 75 per cent need consideration also," he continued. "They alone can carry the burden of the 25 per cent in these times until that minority per cent can begin their upward climb. Through them is the sole hope of the 25 per cent.

"If they be harassed, coerced, intimidated, discouraged, unduly taxed, the whole fabric will fall."

Ray Lyman Wulbur, president of Stanford and Secretary of the Interior in the Hoover cabinet, told the graduates that "change and the General Structure of the Old Agency Kept, With O'Neill as Head.

Strong Position Granted to Labor

Berry in Post; Coonley, Marshall Will Direct Divisions.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that he anticipates further legislation to broaden and strengthen the NRA. In setting up the new organization under the measure recently passed by Congress, he expressed the desire to maintain its general structure in anticipation of this legislation.

The President ordered the following steps to be effective immediately

1. Dissolution of the National Industrial Recovery Board.

2. Appointment of James L. O'Neill, former vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, and recently control officer of NRA, to have complete charge of the organization with the title of acting administrator.

3. Appointment of Leon C. Marshall, of the Brookings Institution, and until yesterday a member of the National Industrial Recovery Board, as head of a division of review.

4. Appointment of Prentiss J. Coonley, code administration director, as director of a new Division of Business Co-operation.

5. Appointment of George L. Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen's Union and until yesterday a division administrator, as assistant to O'Neill, representing labor.

6. Appointment of an advisory council to consist of the following: Charles Edison, until yesterday a member of the NIRB; Howell Cheney, New England silk manufacturer; Philip Murray, former member of the NIRB and vice president of the United Mine Workers of America; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Emily Newell Blair, former chairman of the Consumers Advisory Council, and Walton H. Hamilton, Yale professor and former member of the NIRB.

One-Man Rule Again.

Thus the NRA, in its emaciated form, has become once more a one-man controlled organization, after having been directed by a board since the reign of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson. Labor and business are about equally represented in the major part of the organization, with labor having perhaps a slight advantage.

The name of Leon C. Henderson, head of the Research and Planning Division, did not appear in the list of new leaders. In some quarters it had been predicted he might play a major part because of the fact that NRA is now to become largely a research organization. Another name missing was that of W. Averell Harriman, executive officer. Reports that the NRA would be controlled by a board of three men were set aside.

The President did not indicate how many employes would be retained, but he declared a "steady but gradual reduction of personnel" to be a sound public policy.

In announcing his executive orders, which included an order continuing in effect all such previous orders with amendments making them consistent with the new legislation, the President said:

"The administration of the amended act will proceed as rapidly as possible to adjust activities and personnel to conform to present limited objectives.

Appraisal is Aim.

"So long, however, as there is possibility of further legislation, it will be desirable to maintain the general structure of the recovery administration in Washington and in field offices, and to retain those essential members of a trained personnel who can be usefully employed. There will be lasting values in a careful appraisal of the two-year accomplishments of the NRA

15,000 Attack Catholics' Ban In Mexico City

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, June 16.—More than 15,000 Catholics paraded unmolested past the national palace today while their speakers attacked the government, demanding religious liberty.

There was only one incident. A youth shouted "Death to President Cardenas!" and was arrested.

Catholic orators, speaking in front of the Palace of Fine Arts, addressed themselves to visiting Rotarians here to attend the annual international convention, asserting:

"If you were not here we could not parade. We want you to know we are fighting for religious liberty and liberty of conscience."

Rotarians Nervous.

Some Rotarians were noticeably nervous and the question was frequently asked among them, "Will there be a revolution?"

Most of them had been unaware of political developments of the past few days which saw the eight-year reign of Plutarco Elias Calles as undisputed dictator of Mexican politics apparently ended and the government face even farther to the left under the leadership of President Lazaro Cardenas.

Talking in English, several of the Catholic speakers thanked the Rotarians for coming here. Many of the visitors applauded the speeches.

A majority of those in the parade carried banners denouncing Socialistic education and demanding reopening of the churches. One banner read: "We are friends of the American people, but not of Daniels," referring to Josephus Daniels, United States Ambassador to Mexico.

Although the Catholics lacked a permit to parade, police were conspicuously absent and did not attempt to interfere. After marching

Hopkins Denies Job-Dodging Due to Relief Is Widespread

By the Associated Press.

State works progress administrators gathered here last night to learn from Harry L. Hopkins how they should spend millions of work-relief money during the next year.

Hopkins, who simultaneously made public a study which he said "debunked" assertions that persons on relief were turning down private jobs, will tell the administrators today and Tuesday just how much each State will receive, how fast men should be put to work and on what types of projects.

195 Complaints Checked.

Making public findings of investigators who, he said, had checked up 195 complaints of job refusals in Baltimore in March and April, Hopkins said they had found four persons who had turned down jobs simply because they didn't want to work. These, he said, were cut off relief. He added:

"What was discovered in Baltimore probably holds true in many other cities throughout the country. The evidence indicates clearly that the allegations of job refusal have been based on a very few incidents and that these few cases have been magnified by loose talk.

"The factual study of all the alleged refusals debunks the claims that there is widespread preference for relief instead of jobs."

The progress administration conference, similar to the one which touched off the old Civil Works Administration, is designed to frame State "plans," combining expensive and inexpensive activities, so as to attain the $1,100 average annual expenditure per man available for each job.

Two Factors Dominant.

In addition—because the two constant factors in the situation were the 3,500,000 whom President Roosevelt hopes to put to work, and the $4,000,000,000 available to do it with—the conference will consider the availability of $1,270,602,600 in projects already approved.

As the State officials assembled, the Works Application Division announced Army engineer applications for $17,622,000 for the construction of 362 miles of flood control levees and reservoirs in Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri and Oklahoma. The Navy Department also asked $786,000 for five projects in California and Florida and the Veterans Administration $1,650,070 for new buildings in a number of States.

Roosevelt Set To Keep Teeth In Utilities Bill

Will Fight House Move to Ditch 'Death Sentence' Passed in Senate.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

President Roosevelt will use all his influence to prevent revolting House Democrats from destroying the "death sentence" provision of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill already approved by the Senate, it was reliably reported last night.

He may be joined in the fight by Vice President John N. Garner, one of the shrewdest politicians who ever ruled the House as speaker and who still wields considerable influence over the Texas and other large State delegations. Garner has said privately that he considers the provision outlawing unnecessary utility holding companies by 1942 the most vital piece of legislation to come before Congress since Mr. Roosevelt took office.

The section was approved by the Senate when a substitute by Sen. William Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois, was defeated by only one vote. Garner sat in the presiding officer's chair ready to cast the winning vote for the Administration in the event of a tie.

Big Election Issue.

New Dealers say frankly that the holding company bill may become one of the main political issues in the 1936 Presidential campaign. Conservative Republicans in the Senate voted almost solidly against the measure in the face of a challenge by Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, (Democrat), Montana, that the old guard make it a political issue. Wheeler warned the Republicans that if they took the question to the country they would not receive

Fair Tree-Sitter Comes Down After Injunction Saves Maple

Mrs. Lorraine F. Brown Is Applauded by Civic Leaders for Determined Action Against Ravages of Street Work at Woodstock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., June 16.—An injunction issued by Judge Phillip Williams of the Circuit Court of Shenandoah County yesterday permitted Mrs. Lorraine French Brown to leave her perch in the branches of a maple tree in front of her residence at Woodstock, to which she had climbed to save the tree from destruction by contractors.

While Mrs. Brown denies that she had either a pitchfork or a pistol as she guarded the tree yesterday, a report to that effect was current in the community. Her climbing the tree was not for the purpose of seeking notoriety, but when other trees in the neighborhood were felled despite a storm of protests and even the court's injunction in the Stephens cases, the determined woman personally defied the contractors.

Her act won her the plaudits of a large number of citizens, particularly the women of Woodstock, who are mincing no words in denouncing the tree destruction.

It was stated officially just before the street improvement was started that only three or four trees would be cut, and when axmen indicated by their work that many trees would be felled there was an outburst of indignation such as the town has never before experienced.

There has been a Sunday lull in the excitement, although wherever two or more citizens meet, trees are the chief topic of discussion. Thus far two court injunctions and a criminal warrant have been issued, and the community is anticipating the trial of two of the tree cutters before Judge M. L. Walton, jr., Shenandoah County trial justice, tomorrow morning for criminal trespass growing out of cutting trees in front of the home of S. B. Hepner.

It was stated here last night that an indignation meeting of citizens may be held early in the week.

3 Drowned Is Week-End's Toll; Girl, 6, Rescued by D. C. Visitor

Drownings took three lives in Maryland and Virginia during the week-end. But from a woodland pool near Silver Spring, a 6-year-old girl, gone beyond her depth, was saved yesterday afternoon by a Colorado youth, here for a two-day visit.

Fred Stone, 22, saw the girl struggling in the Devils Den pool of the Paint Branch River near White Oak, Md. Some 200 persons must have been swimming there then, witnesses related later, some being members of The Washington Post Wanderbirds Club. But no one else noticed the little girl until she had gone down twice.

Stone jumped from the bank, fully clothed, and hauled the girl, Ethel Seek, of Silver Spring, to safety. Others applied artificial respiration, and after she was treated by Dr. Claude W. Mitchell, of Silver Spring, she went home.

It was the seventh rescue for Stone. He comes from Fort Collins, Colo., the son of a former president of the Colorado Bar Association, and is a student at Colorado Agricultural College.

Among those drowned was Dorothy Reichert, 14, of Baltimore, who slipped into a hole in the Magothy River Saturday at Severna Park, Md., while on a Sunday School outing. Her body was recovered yesterday.

Politics a Peril In Wheat Plan, Economist Says

Brookings Report Praises AAA Conduct to Date, Fears for Future.

By the Associated Press.

An assertion that "neither the results nor the promise" of the farm adjustment program "justify indefinite continuation of the experiment in the form that now seems in contemplation" was made yesterday in a study of the wheat program issued by the Brookings Institution.

It added that while "the AAA has striven, in the main with considerable success, to prevent political influence from determining its wheat program * * * there is a tendency for the spread of a sinister form of political corruption which even its beneficiaries do not recognize as such."

Secretary Wallace's ever-formal granary plan was described as "superfluous" in some respects.

More Favorable on Tobacco.

The report was made in the form of a 441-page volume written by Joseph S. Davis, a director of the Food Research Institute of Stanford University. He was on leave while making the study.

A more favorable report on the AAA tobacco program was made by Harold B. Rowe, of the institution's regular staff. Rowe said, in a study not yet available in detail, that substantial financial benefits have been obtained for tobacco growers, with little, if any, added burden on consumers through higher prices.

Devoting 13 chapters to a detailed explanation of the AAA wheat program, Davis turned the last chapter to comment upon the past and future of wheat adjustment. He wrote:

"I regard the first two years under the wheat program as representing a valiant experiment which yielded certain results which were earnestly desired in the face of an emergency. The expriment has been too short, and the conditions under which it was tried have as yet been too unrepresentative, to permit final appraisal of its potentialities for good or ill.

High Credit for Conduct.

"Certain tendencies within it, and accompanying it, seem to me contrary to the national interest. I am disposed to give the AAA high credit for its conduct of the experiment to date."

Criticizing the right of Congress to fix a parity price or fair value for wheat, Davis said "my own opinion is that wheat growers have been miseducated into believing that they are fairly entitled to 'parity prices' of wheat as Congress may be persuaded to define them."

The AAA has striven "with considerable success," he said, to prevent political influence from determining its wheat program or interfering with its effective execution.

"Nevertheless," Davis continued, "the distribution of payments to wheat growers powerfully influences votes in the regions most concerned. Once this policy is established, and the flow of funds well started, attitudes of voters tend to be determined not by the inherent wisdom of the policy as a whole, but by the desire to keep these funds flowing.

Questions Four-Year Plan.

"As in the notorious cases of the protective tariff and 'pork barrel' appropriations for rivers and harbors improvements, those who get such favors from the Government seek to retain and enlarge them; and their opposition to similar favors to other regions and other groups is weakened."

The report questioned the advisability of launching the four-year program started after the recent favorable wheat referendum because it was "very much like that experimentally adopted two years ago to cope with quite a different situation."

The "fair exchange value" sought for wheat was described by the writer as "a statutory phrase, not necessarily an economic fact."

Davis said the major achievement of the wheat program in its first two years was the increase of the income of wheat growers as a group by probably more than $200,000,000 above what they would have received otherwise. This was done, he said, with little burden on the public treasury, but mainly at the expense of consumers of wheat.

Drought Big Factor.

The writer credited progress in raising prices and reducing surpluses not mainly to the AAA, but largely to two successive years of drought, together with the influence of the tariff and dollar depreciation.

Speaking of the "ever-normal granary" proposed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, under which surpluses would be stored against poor crop years, Davis said "as an insurance against national food scarcity such 'planned wheat reserves' seem to be superfluous."

Generally, Davis declared, the wheat program "has won neither vigorous condemnation nor enthusiastic indorsement."

Commenting upon the theory of the international wheat agreement, Davis wrote, "the real potentialities of the device in operation, for either good or ill, largely remain to be demonstrated."

Protection of the consumer interests, Davis said, lie not so much in legal limitations but in the fear "lest a rising tide of consumer protests should sweep away the processing tax system and thus destroy the financial foundation of the whole program."

Weed Growers Helped.

In the study of the tobacco program, Rowe said producers would receive significant financial benefits if the program were continued according to present AAA policies, although the benefits probably would be less than in 1933 and 1934.

Growers' incomes during the past two years, the report said, increased "very considerably" because of price increases and benefit payments. Processing taxes were said to have furnished adequate revenues to finance the program, and apparently the benefits to growers were derived from the former profit margins of the manufacturers.

It may be, Rowe said, that the benefits of the program would not permanently justify the extensive and complex machinery for operation of the program.

"But the evidence seems clear," the report said, "that during its first two seasons of operation the program has been successful in attaining the objectives which were sought with respect to tobacco."

Between You and Me

Democratic Stronghold in South Seen Weakening; Relief, States' Rights Cause of Trouble.

By Raymond Clapper

Atlanta, Ga., June 16.—Usually a Democratic President or a Democratic Presidential candidate can count, without qualification, upon the 10 Southern States. He takes them for granted, and builds in the remainder of the country, upon this secure nest egg.

This factor, which has a profound effect upon national politics, has failed only once—in the case of Alfred E. Smith—when religion stirred such violent emotions that the masses of Southern voters broke away from their leaders and defeated the Democratic presidential candidate in four Southern States, and gave him a close race in some of the others.

However, only minor scars were left, and four years later all were securely Democratic again. But now, due to certain developments, the political stability of the South is being questioned again. Southerners are seriously debating whether Mr. Roosevelt can next year hold all 10 pillars of Dixie.

* * * *

Louisiana and Georgia are the most in question. Both remained Democratic in 1928 and the fact that they now are subject to doubt indicates how deeply the political situation has been affected by entirely new factors arising since Mr. Roosevelt took office. In a close race, the 22 electoral votes of these two States might conceivably hold the balance of power.

The Southern situation can not be attributed solely to the anti-Administration agitation of Huey Long in Louisiana and Gov. Eugene Talmadge in Georgia. They have capitalized and exploited dissatisfaction which exists generally throughout the South, and in their respective States have advanced it further toward the point of a break. The same tinder which they have lighted exists in other States, but lacks the spark of personal leadership which Long and Talmadge have provided.

Conversations with numerous Southern governors, political leaders and private citizens from corporation lawyers down to a fisherman who has a pet alligator named Katherine in the back waters north of Biloxi, Miss., developed three sources of trouble, all working against Mr. Roosevelt. One is relief, the second is the factional political warfare growing out of the struggle to control relief money, and the third is the State's right issue which developed after the Supreme Court's NRA decision.

The State's right issue which in the North has taken the form of a Republican "Save the Constitution" campaign, is equally explosive in the South because it evokes the traditional sentiments which have lasted since the Civil War. Giving the Federal Government enlarged control over economic and social problems means to many Southerners the danger at some future time of Federal control of elections. They remember the carpet-baggery, the "force bills" and conjure up future possibilities. There is opposition to granting the Federal Government power which might at some future time be used to give political power to the Negro. Southern sentiment appears strongly set against a constitutional amendment, regardless of the declarations of Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Ambassador Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, in favor of such amendment.

* * * *

Whether the South generally would support the Republican Party in seeking to express this opposition is questionable. In Mississippi, the Republican national committeeman is a Negro and in other Southern States such Republican organization as exists often is dominated by Negro leaders. More probably the tendency will be to meet the constitutional issue if it arises by refusing to ratify an amendment.

Relief is causing the more acute trouble. As many have feared would happen, there is an increasing disposition to regard Federal relief as something permanent to which the States are entitled. Governors at Biloxi, in complaining about Federal control of relief distribution, asked repeatedly, "Whose money is this anyway?." It was, they answered themselves, the people's money. In Atlanta, the county relief authorities have refused to take over the feeding of 10,000 unemployables who, under the new Federal works program are to be cut off from Federal relief. The county authorities said they could not afford the money this would cost. Unless the Federal Government reconsiders and carries these unemployables as in the past, they will be without help after July 1.

"I'm on to them," he said. "They have cut us down to $19 a month and expect us to support a family on that, so they will have more money to pay up North. Anybody can see through that. They think they have us Democrats down South. They're putting the money up in New England where they will have a fight to win. We're on to that bunch."

Thus, no matter from what angle you approach the relief problem, you encounter not gratitude for temporary help, but a feeling that the Government is obligated to continue it and a resistance to the present effort of Washington to shift over to work relief and turn the unemployables back on the States and local units. This is all the more unwelcome because some Southern States have contributed practically nothing to relief and it means an additional burden to them. In Mississippi the State has put up nothing. Not only that, but Gov. Conner has saved out of his Federal relief sums $1,000,000 which he is holding out to be distributed through his own organization which he will refuse to surrender to the new Federal works director who has been sent into Mississippi to administrate the new program independently of the State government. Gov. Conner says the money was sent to him to be distributed under his direction, and, he says, the Federal Government can't take it away fro mhim.

This situation in Mississippi illustrates the political warfare which is growing up around relief. It has become the great patronage prize. Senator Harrison, up for re-election next year, risked his political future by going down the line for Mr. Roosevelt in opposition to the soldier bonus in addition to defending the administration on other questions. Now he insists that the administration reciprocate by giving him control of work relief in Mississippi. The orders were given and Harrison threw the relief job to a Bilbo preacher who is setting up an organization duplicating the existing state ERA, which is headed by a man recommended to Gov. Conner by Harry Hopkins.

Thus, because the South operates on a one-party basis, and the political fighting is carried on between Democratic factions rather than between parties, the Administration tends to become involved in factional party contests. That is a new development, for it has been traditional that an Administration at Washington strains to remain neutral between party factions within a State.

In addition to these elements which are chiselling into the popularity of President Roosevelt is the criticism of the business man and many of the more influential private citizens who view the New Deal experiments about as the Springfield "grass roots" speakers did. The combined effect of this grumbling and hostility is to make Mr. Roosevelt appear quite unpopular.

But in only the two States of Louisiana and possibly Georgia does it seem that this feeling has much chance of being reflected in hostile electoral votes. Both Long and Talmadge are out to beat Mr. Roosevelt.

Long is able to do anything with Louisiana that he wishes. He completely controls the electoral machinery. Talmadge is rapidly establishing the same supremacy in Georgia, appealing to the rural voter on the one hand and to the employers and capitalists on the other. With his opposition to organized labor, down here they call him a conservative rabble rouser.

Senator Huey Long is so completely recognized as the whole government of Louisiana that one hostess at the Biloxi conference on meeting the wife of Gov. Allen of Louisiana, automatically said, "How do you do, Mrs. Long."

Mrs. Allen said it happens to her everywhere she goes.

House Ordered To Speed Bills For President

Democratic Ranks Told Leaders Hope to Close Session in July.

By the Associated Press.

Orders went to the House Democratic rank and file yesterday to prepare for swift action on Administration legislation in a drive to regain the lead in the race with the Senate toward a "decks-cleared" adjournment status.

Chagrined over the Senate's recent spurt that put the House behind, Democratic leaders determined to jockey the representatives back into the van by rushing the $500,000,000 nuisance tax bill through today under a "gag rule" and by swinging without a pause into consideration of the farm adjustment bill drawn to meet constitutional requirements. Somewhat hopefully, the House chieftains aimed at a mid-July adjournment.

Holding Measure Rushed.

Pressure also was applied on the House Interstate Commerce Committee for a fast report on the Senate's bill outlawing "unnecessary" utility holding companies, with most of the leaders trying to compromise, provided President Roosevelt will accept it.

While the Senate Democratic leaders wrestle with amendments seeking to liberalize the House approved Administration social security bill this week, House committeess planned favorable action on the Guffey coal bill, the Wagner labor disputes measure, and the new ship subsidy legislation.

There was a tangle between the Ways and Means Committee and the Administration over where to put liquor regulation—the former wants it in the Treasury and the latter under a new alcohol commission to replace the FACA doomed by the NRA decision.

A vote by midweek on the social security bill was desired by Democratic leaders in the Senate. Such action would clear the way for the Administration banking bill, provided the banking committee concludes its deliberations. In event this program is not achieved, they were prepared to substitute the revamped farm administration bill.

White House pressure was being brought on the House Military Committee to report the Senate-approved measure broadening the Tennessee Valley Authority. So far, the opposition which succeeded in tabling the measure has stood fast.

Rapid action was desired by the Administration on the Guffey coal bill to avert a possible bituminous coal strike on July 1, pending the outcome of wage-and-hour negotiations to be resumed between operators and union leaders on June 24.

The two branches still were tangled over the $460,000,000 naval supply bill and the Senate's provision for funds to start construction of 24 new warships. The House has yet to act on the Senate's motor-vehicle regulation measure, its food and drug bill and the Black bill to register lobbyists.

County Pays for Hurts Warden Gave Prisoner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 16.—A bill for $32.50 presented yesterday to the Allegany County Board of Commissioners by Memorial Hospital, for services to Jesse Piper, of Oldtown, was paid in full. Piper was arrested Monday by Game Warren Henry Kenny for gigging in Saw Mill Run, near Oldtown, and was also charged with assault upon Kenney when he made the arrest. Injuries received when he resisted arrest prevented his appearance, it was reported, and resulted in the bill from the hospital.

Perry A. Nicklin, county treasurer, said at the meeting that he did not see why the county should pay such items when the board makes a yearly $15,000 appropriation to Memorial Hospital.

Document Tax $9,400.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 16.—Waynesboro people will pay approximately $9,400 in tax, beginning today, as a result of the new documentary stamp tax for Pennsylvania, which provides for a tax of 5 cents for each $100 or fractional part thereof on notes, renewals of notes, mortgages and deeds. Loans and discounts in the two local banking institutions amounted to $4,700,000, according to the statements of last March.

The splendidly equipped chemistry laboratory at Staunton delights boys of scientific bent. Some Washington boy will enter the academy next fall as the winner of a two-year scholarship offered by The Washington Post.

Misses Dessez Applauds Opportunity Presented Youths at Staunton.

"It's like a dream that's too good to be true. The Washington Post deserves the most enthusiastic thanks of all Legionnaires in the District for offering their sons the opportunity to take part in this competition."

That was the reaction of Miss Eunice Dessez to the announcement of The Post scholarship contest which will drop a $2,000 educational plum into the lap of the son of some veteran of the World War. The winner will spend his third and fourth years of high school at famed Staunton Military Academy, with his tuition, board, uniforms and other incidental expenses paid.

The District Department of the American Legion is cooperating in conducting the contest, and James O'Connor Roberts, department commander, has appointed Miss Dessez to work with The Post in arranging details of the contest. As director of education of war orphans of the legion, Miss Dessez is particularly suited to serve in this capacity. War orphans of the District are her special interest, and those who are eligible by virtue of having completed the second year of high school this month are being invited to take part.

Requirements Liberalized.

The contest, however, is not confined to "war orphans," a term which officially includes only the children of men who were killed in action or died as a result of wounds received in action before July 1, 1921. Miss Dessez's heart goes out to the children who are deprived of certain governmental aid because their fathers' wounds were incurred after that date. She is interested, too, in the children of disabled veterans, who, because of their patriotic service, are unable to earn a living and give their families the luxuries, or even the necessities, that any man wants to provide for his loved ones.

As a recruiting officer, she sent many a man to war and whether or not they returned, she is keenly solicitous for the welfare of their children. Any boy whose father saw service in the World War is eligible, providing he fulfills the scholastic requirements. However, in case of a close contest, peference will be given some needy boy, whose family can not afford to give him this type of education, so that the competition will fulfill its best purpose.

Scholarship Will Rule.

The decision will be made on the basis of scholarship record, character, and an essay which each contestant must write on "Why I would like to attend Staunton." An entry blank will be provided on application to The Post, and a booklet will be sent each contestant graphically describing the advantages offered at the academy. This will help each boy to visualize the value of the prize and write his essay.

The splendidly equipped chemistry laboratory will delight any boy of scientific bent. "Art," a subject which often is anathema to the boyish mind, takes on a new meaning at Staunton, for if he chooses, he can study industrial design, in reference to automobiles, radio, steamships and other commercial inventions. Besides high educational standards, the school offers rare opportunities for cultivating hobbies, extra-curricular activities and companionship.

To enroll, a boy must notify The Washington Post, whereupon an application blank and full instructions will be sent him. Communications should be addressed to Alice Fox Pitts, Staunton Contest Director, in care of The Post.

Contracts of Schools In Berkeley Questioned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 16.—A question as to the legality of contracts for the coming year signed by the Berkeley County board of education and by teachers was raised here yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Bessie D. Kilmer upon receipt of a telegram from the State board of public works in which it was stated "contracts for definite sums should not be consummated until the budgets of revenues for maintenance and teachers are so formed as to enable operation of the nine-month term."

Teachers in the county have received their contracts and returned them to the proper officers. Signatures of the board president has been directed. With the board of public works voting, 4-3, to delay contracts, Miss Kilmer gave it as her opinion the present contracts are invalid. The board has not expressed any opinion since the ruling was made and the matter will probably be considered at the next scheduled meeting on June 28.

Presbyterians to Air Rows on Modernism

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., June 16.—A number of cases involving the fundamentalist-modernist controversy within the Presbyterian Church are scheduled for an airing here at the sessions of the Synod of Pennsylvania, convening Tuesday.

The cases will be those appealed from presbyteries by ministers or laymen who have failed to resign from the Independent Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions sponsored by the Rev. Gresham Machen, D. D., of the New Brunswick, N. J., Presbytery.

Northern Neck Ready To Harvest Wheat Crop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., June 16.—The harvesting of one of Northern Neck's best wheat crops in many years will begin this week, Weather permitting, new wheat from this section will be on its way to market next week. There is a large acreage of wheat in cultivation in this section, the growth of straw is heavy and the grain plump and firm.

The crop of tomatoes is developing fast and shipment of fruit will begin late this month. It is estimated there are at least 2,000 acres of early tomatoes in cultivation in Northumberland County alone.

Midway Show Planned At Firemen's Carnival

By a Special Correspondent.

Tappahannock, Va., June 16.—The program for the firemen's carnival here June 27, 28 and 29 will include a midway, beauty contest, amateur acts, political rally, band concert, baseball games and firemen's ball.

On Saturday evening the political candidates of Essex County and those running for the House of Delegates from Essex, Middlesex and King and Queen Counties will speak to the citizens. The 20-piece and King and Queen counties will also furnish music.

Menhaden Season Will Begin Today

Over 30 Boats to Put Out For First Catches.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., June 16.—A fleet or 30 or more fishing steamers from several large plants in Northumberland and Lancaster counties, in the Northern Neck of Virginia, will start out into the Chesapeake Bay, Atlantic Ocean and other waters tomorrow in search of menhaden.

The opening of the season will give employment to approximately 1,500 in this section. The fish caught, which run into millions annually, are brought to the plants on shore and converted into fish scrap and oil.

The industry is one of the largest in the Northern Neck territory. Millions of dollars are invested in the plants, equipment and fishing steamers. The season usually lasts about six months. Reedville, in the lower end of Northumberland County, is the hub of the industry in this section.

1,800 Troopers Bring Surcease In Omaha Riots

The Labor Situation.

Street cars ran in Omaha under protection of 1,800 National Guardsmen.

Edward McGrady, Federal mediator, proposed he be named sole arbitrator in the dispute at the Toledo Edison Co.

The Central Labor Council in South Bend, Ind., threatened a general strike, affecting 20,000 workers in sympathy with the Oliver Farm Equipment walkout.

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., June 16.—Martial law rested lightly but firmly over over Omaha today as 1,800 Nebraska National Guardsmen, in full field equipment, brought surcease from a series of bloody encounters between police and tram car strike sympathizers.

Citizens pursued usual Sunday activities without hindrance as troops, which had arrived in detachments throughout the night, made no effort to patrol the town. The military announced the martial law, decreed yesterday by Lieut. Gov. W. H. Jurgensen, would not supersede civil courts except in cases connected with rioting or the strike of the union employes of the Omaha and Council Bluff street railways.

Street cars ran this morning, but indications were their operation—generating spark of three successive night riots last week—which resulted in one death and injuries to 100 other persons, would not be undertaken tonight.

Gov. R. L. Cochran was expected to decide how long the guardsmen would remain in charge when he arrived today from Gulfport, Miss.

In contrast with the mood of South Omaha on three previous nights, a crowd there which watched the first troops march in last night was entirely good-humored.

Composed mainly of youngsters, the guardsmen—Nebraska's entire military force—were confident they would experience no trouble but were equipped to squelch quickly any outburst.

The car strike has been in progress since April 20.

Adjut. Gen. H. J. Paul, commanding the troops, said he believed arbitration was the only hope of disposing of the controversy and added he saw little chance of evacuating troops until the strike was ended. The general estimated the occupation might last three weeks and cost between $100,000 and $500,000.

McGrady Offers Plan To End Toledo Strike

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, June 16.—A plan for arbitrating the Toledo Edison Co. strike gained the first step of approval tonight.

The plan was submitted by Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, in a meeting with the electrical workers union wage committee of five. McGrady himself would serve as arbitrator in the first negotiations and then would be supplanted by a committee of three.

Oliver S. Myers, business agent of the union, announced he would recommend approval of the arbitration plan at a meeting later tonight of the strike committee of 35.

He also called a meeting of the entire union membership for tomorrow morning, asking that workers from all plants of the company be represented. If the strike committee approves the plan, it will be given to the membership for ratification.

McGrady's plan would make him the sole arbitrator to determine whether the union should receive an immediate 5 per cent wage increase.

Should this be decided in the affirmative, he said, the balance of the 20 per cent increase demanded would be submitted to an arbitration board of three.

He said the board would include one member chosen by the company, another chosen by the union and the third appointed by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Oliver Myers, union business agent, asserted the committee took no action at a conference with McGrady and that it would meet later to decide whether to submit the proposal to the union membership.

McGrady met earlier today with Toledo Edison officials and it was reported, but not confirmed, that the executives consented to the conciliator's proposal.

A conference between company and union representatives, at which McGrady presided, recessed about 3 p. m. today after prolonged discussions of the issues of the dispute.

Participants said the conference had made "some progress." It adjourned subject to McGrady's call.

By the United Press.

South Bend, Ind., June 16.—President S. A. Sweeney of the Central Trades and Labor Union, threatening a general strike which might throw 20,000 persons out of work, today called a mass meeting for Tuesday night.

With tension increasing, Mayor George W. Freyermuth announced he will confer Monday night with representatives of the Oliver Farm Equipment Co. and the union. Sweeney warned that if no compromise is reached at the conference a strike vote is assured the following night.

The chief issue is reinstatement of some 300 Oliver workers dismissed recently, among them Homer Baker, president of Oliver Federal Labor Union. The union charged discrimination against labor leaders.

A delegation representing the labor council told the mayor the strike would tie all major industries here, halting street car, milk and taxicab service and throw 20,000 out of work but some smaller unions have been reported unfavorable to a sympathy walkout.

White House NRA Statement

Following is the text of the White House statement announcing formation of the new National Industrial Recovery Administration.

In connection with the signing today of executive orders providing for the continuance and reorganization of a restricted NRA, the President stated that:

"The administration of the amended act will proceed as rapidly as possible to adjust activities and personnel to conform to present limited objectives.

"So long, however, as there is possibility of further legislation it will be desirable to maintain the general structure of the recovery Administration in Washington and in field offices, and to retain those essential members of a trained personnel who can be usefully employed. There will be lasting values in a careful appraisal of the two-year accomplishments of the NRA and in preserving for permanent use the records of that experience. This can be done most efficiently and economically by those heretofore engaged in the work of codification.

A steady but gradual reduction of personnel is, therefore, a sound public policy which will also avoid imposing undue hardships on faithful public employes who can continue to render a service of exceptional value to the Government. It will be necessary, of course, to retain a sufficient field force to report on the effects of code abolition. This will include information covering changes in labor and fair practice standards."

The executive orders follow:

Executive Order.

TERMINATING THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY BOARD AND REORGANIZING THE NATIONAL RECOVERY ADMINISTRATION.

By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me by Title I of the national industrial recovery act (48 Stat. 195), as amended by Senate Joint Resolution 113, approved June 14, 1935, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. The National Industrial Recovery Board created by Executive Order No. 6859 of September 27, 1934, is hereby terminated, and to provide for the continuing administration of the provisions of Title I of the national industrial recovery act there is hereby created the office of administrator of the National Recovery Administration.

2. The administrator of the National Recovery Administration shall administer the provisions of Title I of the national industrial recovery act as amended by Senate Joint Resolution 113, approved June 14, 1935, and may exercise all of those powers heretofore conferred by executive order upon the National Recovery Board, subject to the limitations upon such powers contained in the said Senate Joint Resolution 113, and subject also to the further provisions of this executive order. The administrator is authorized, under the direction of the President, to appoint, employ, discharge, and fix the compensation, define the duties, and direct the conduct of such officers and employes as may be necessary for such administration. I hereby appoint James L. O'Neill as acting administrator of the National Recovery Administration.

3. For the further administration of Title I of the national industrial recovery act as amended, there is hereby established the Division of Review. The Division of Review shall assemble, anayize and report upon the statistical information and records of experience of the operations of the various trades and industries heretofore subject to codes of fair competition, shall study the effects of such codes upon trade, industrial and labor conditions in general, and other related matters, shall make available for the protection and promotion of the public interest an adequate review of the effects of the administration of Title I of the national industrial recovery act, and the principles and policies put into effect thereunder, and shall otherwise aid the President in carrying out his functions under the said title. I hereby appoint Leon C. Marshall director of the Division of Review.

4. There is hereby established the Division of Business Co-operation, the function and purpose of which shall be to aid in the voluntary maintenance by trade and industrial groups of standards of fair competition, in the elimination of unfair competition in the employment of labor or in trade practices, and in maintaining sources of information and records of experience useful in the work of the Division of Review, and to otherwise assist in effectuating, so far as possible, the policies of the national industrial recovery act as amended. I hereby appoint Prentiss L. Coonley director of the Division of Business Co-operation.

5. The administrator of the National Recovery Administration, the director of the Division of Review, and the director of Business Co-operation and all other officers appointed by this order shall serve under the direction of the President and shall be paid such compensation as he shall fix, and the administrator shall proceed forthwith to reduce as rapidly as possible the number of persons now employed in the administration of Title I of the national industrial recovery act to the number necessary to perform the duties of such administration as herein, or hereafter, prescribed, and in so doing he shall make proper provision for the allowance of accumulated leave for employes entitled thereto, facilitate the transfer of employes whose services may be desired by other agencies or departments of the Government, and protect the continuity of the administration for its future usefulness in effectuating the policies and purposes of Title I of the national industrial recovery act as amended. I hereby appoint George L. Berry, assistant to the administrator of the National Recovery Administration to represent labor.

6. There is hereby established an Advisory Council in aid of the National Recovery Administration, and I hereby appoint as members of the said council: Charles Edison, Howell Cheney, Philip Murray, William Green, Emily Newell Blair and Walton H. Hamilton.

7. All orders and regulations heretofore issued concerning the administration of Title I of the national industrial recovery act are hereby modified to the extent necessary to make this order fully effective.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
The White House, June 15, 1935.

Executive Order.

CONTINUING IN EFFECT EXECUTIVE ORDERS ISSUED UNDER TITLE I OF THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT AND EXTENDING THE EXISTENCE OF AGENCIES CREATED BY SUCH ORDERS UNTIL APRIL 1, 1936.

Whereas Senate joint resolution 113, approved June 14, 1935, extends until April 1, 1936, the provisions of Title I of the national industrial recovery act as amended by said joint resolution; and

Whereas the President has heretofore issued various executive orders under and pursuant to the authority conferred upon him by the provisions of the said Title I, the effective period of which executive orders is limited directly by the said orders or by the said Title I to June 16, 1935; and

Whereas it is necessary and desirable to maintain the continuity of the agencies established, the requirements imposed, and the other activities heretofore authorized by such executive orders so far as consistent with the provisions of the said Title I as amended:

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me by Title I of the national industrial recovery act (48 Stat. 195) as amended and extended by Senate Joint Resolution 113 approved June 14, it is hereby ordered that all existing executive orders heretofore issued under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Title I of the national industrial recovery act be, and they are, hereby amended so as to continue them in effect and to extend their operation, and also to extend the authority and activities of any agency created thereunder until April 1, 1936, so far as consistent with the provisions of the national industrial recovery act as amended and extended, subject, however, to any limitation, modification, or cancellation the President may hereafter make by executive order: Provided, however, that this order shall not be construed as an exercise by the President of any authority, or as authorizing any person or agency acting under authority conferred by the President, to approve or prescribe codes of fair competition, to provide for the enforcement of such codes, or to take any other action not authorized by the provisions of the said Title I of the national industrial recovery act as amended.

Set-up on NRA Hints of Laws To Widen Scope and in preserving for permanent use the records of that experience. This can be done most effectively and economically by those heretofore engaged in the work of codification.

"A steady but gradual reduction of personnel is, therefore, a sound public policy which will also avoid imposing undue hardships on faithful public employes who can continue to render a service of exceptional value to the Government. It will be necessary, of course, to retain a sufficient force to report on the effects of code abolition. This will include information covering changes in labor and fair practice standards."

Under the President's order, the new NRA will have two principal functions:

1. A study of the effects of codes of fair competition and the results of their elimination. This work will be under the direction of Marshall.

2. Co-operation with business in the formation of voluntary maintenance of standards of competition. This work will be under Coonley's direction.

New Division in Offing.

The NRA, at least for the present, is thus limited to these two functions. Legislation providing that Government contractors must agree to maintain certain standards of wages, hours and the elimination of child labor, has been proposed by the President. Enactment of this legislation is expected to result in a third division of the new NRA.

President Roosevelt ordered that all accumulated leaves should be granted NRA employes and asked that transfer of employes to any other departments that might require their services be facilitated.

The President's order did not relieve the uncertainty of individuals among the Recovery Administration's 5,400 employes. Although he fixed no figure, it is believed this number will be cut gradually to 1,500, at most. Officials appointed by authority of the executive orders are expected to make this reduction. No salaries were named in the order, but O'Neill was given authority to fix the compensation of subordinate employes. All the officials continue in service at the pleasure of the President.

Speculation Stirred.

President Roosevelt's reference to possible future NRA legislation came as something of a surprise and started speculation as to what he might be planning. The new law extends only to April 1 and it was believed that the President is considering a program for presentation to the next Congress. It may include amendment of the Constitution to give the Government powers of business control which the Supreme Court has held the present Constitution denies.

O'Neill is on temporary leave from his job as vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. He has been in charge principally of NRA personnel organization, which has been in a somewhat chaotic situation with the various changes of direction. Coonley recently has been right-hand man to Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the NIRA, whose resignation became effective yesterday.

O'Neill is a banker with a banker's conservatism. He has none of the spectacular attributes of Gen. Johnson nor the publicist characteristics of Richberg. He describes himself as "not a glamorous fellow."

Cotton Association Acts for Code Rules

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 16.—The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers moved today to police the industry in the interest of voluntary code compliance.

Ernest N. Hood, president, named a committee of five charged with the duty of seeing that Northern cotton mills make no changes in hours and wage scales despite the demise of the NRA's cotton code.

Southern mills already have taken similar action.

Lincoln Baylies, of Nashua, N. H., chairman of the committee, said tonight that "formation of the committee gives the general public further assurance that the Northern cotton textile industry is endeavoring with all its strength and influence to play fair and square with mill workers, distributors and the consumer."

The committee will seek compliance of the resolution, passed last week by the Northern cotton manufacturers as a Boston meeting, by which the mills, despite the invalidation of the code by the Supreme Court decision, pledged to "make no changes in the conduct of the cotton textile business."

Woman to Explore The Jungles Alone

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—Dr. Mary L. Jobe Akeley, explorer, will leave Wednesday on a one-woman expedition to Africa, the American Museum of Natural History announced today.

She will go to the remotest parts of the Transvaal and Southern Rhodesia to survey strongholds of wild life and collect material for the museum. She is adviser in the museum's Akeley African hall.

Mrs. Akeley will organize her own safari, traveling alone most of the time and living in the open. She has already spent 15 months in Africa.

unexpected are good stimulants. You need not fear them if you are prepared and change with them while still keeping your life course."

"Stanford," he added, "has tried to make you respect facts."

It was Mr. Hoover's second appearance in two weeks before a university graduating class.

On June 3 he addressed the graduates of Drake University, Des Moines, assailing bureaucracy.

In his recent public appearances and comments upon public questions, Mr. Hoover has advocated a return to the gold standard; the protection of relief recipients against defeatism, and congressional abolition of the NRA.

Assistant Selected At Waynesboro Church

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 16.—The Rev. Harold V. O. Lounsbury, of Washington, has been elected assistant rector to the Rev. A. G. W. Pffafko, rector of Episcopal churches of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., and this place. Although the Rev. Mr. Lounsbury will reside at the Summit resort section, he will devote his time principally to the St. Mary's Church, Waynesboro.

Vestrymen also elected Joseph Bowers, of this place, organist of the two churches, succeeding L. W. Shover, resigned.

Roosevelt Aims To Keep Teeth In Wheeler Bill

Will Fight House Move to Ditch 'Death Sentence' Passed by Senate.

enough votes in 1936 "to wad a shot gun."

Such a tax was imposed during the war and was repealed during the Harding Administration. Repeal of this levy and the income tax laws permitting consolidated returns encouraged the holding company evil, he said.

"It is as much the fault of Government as the crooks in the utility industry," Pettengill said. "I hold no brief for these thieves and do not want to do anything which will permit them to go on robbing the people.

Summoned to White House.

"But I believe we can and should attack this problem sensibly and in a way that will not endanger the savings of millions of investors in utility stocks. By imposing an intercorporation tax and providing for strict regulation, we will soon see the unnecessary utility holding companies pass out of existence, and that is what the President wants."

President Roosevelt insists that effective regulation can not be provided because of the intricate financial set-up of the utility holding companies. He mentioned this in a note to Wheeler which the Montana Senator read a few minutes before the Senate voted on the Dieterich amendment.

The Chief Executive summoned Rayburn to the White House Saturday where he again insisted upon the "death sentence" clause in the face of Rayburn's advice that the rebellious House would not accept it. Thus, Mr. Roosevelt's hopes of victory lie in the amount of pressure he can bring upon his own party members in the lower house and in the conference between the two houses to follow later.

Wheeler told the United Press that regardless of House modifications he would insist in conference upon the elimination feature.

"I am determined not to yield to the propaganda of the utilities interests," he said. "The Senate conferees, I am sure, will demand what we think is essential—elimination—and I'm sure that, at least, I will insist upon the Senate provision."

Official to Head Scouts At Frostburg Camp

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., June 16.—District Commissioner James A. Wain will have charge of the Frostburg Boy Scout Camp at Millerseon's Farm, on the South Branch, from today to Sunday.

Jack Light, intercollegiate wrestling champion and captain of the Penn State team; Jim Read, Boy Scout leader, and Kenneth Turner, a Penn State lacrosse man, all three Eagle Scouts, will assist Mr. Wain. James Burns, of Hyndman, Pa., is in charge of the waterfront and will teach swimming. Herbert Reichard, a member of the Beall High School faculty, will serve as quartermaster. The three Frostburg troops and the Eckhart troop left for camp this afternoon. Nearly 100 are in camp.

Steel Capacity At 39 Per Cent, This Year's Low

Auto, Structural and Rail Orders Chief Market Support.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 16.—Mid-year finds activity in the iron and steel market following a normal course and subsiding gradually, states the magazine Steel.

The year so far shows much less gain over the first half of 1934 than that period developed compared with 1933, yet steel production totals up to about 55 per cent of the all-time peak in the first six months of 1929.

Currently, the industry is subsisting almost entirely on small, miscellaneous orders, the volume of which is holding up unusually well, providing a cushion against a sharp decline. Without support from important automobile, railroad and structural tonnages, steelworks operations last week declined only 2 points to 39 per cent. The rate is the lowest this year, almost level with that in the closing week of 1934.

Despite the drab appearance of the market, however, the very lack of large-scale buying coupled with certain definite requirements just ahead is inspiring steelmakers to confidence in a vigorous fall upturn. With the early introduction of new automobile models, and the release of Government funds for public works, they expect a definite upward trend by August.

Autos in Retail Stage.

From now on, automobile production will be keyed closely to retail sales, with a succession of relatively small iron and steel purchases through the remainder of June, and in July. The industry looks for a reasonably good summer season. Preliminary work on new models has progressed to a point where makers are taking bids on parts, and while no extensive retooling program is yet contemplated, some substantial orders have been placed for dies. Assemblies last week increased by 3,300 to 91,000.

Structural shape awards showed little change at 6,240 tons. Most of railroad buying was done in Canada, the Canadian National ordering 7,000 tons. Wheeling & Lake Erie purchased 1,100 tons. One thousand tons of plates were placed for the Tygarts River Dam, Grafton, W. Va.

Prices are expected to receive their first test of negotiations under way for large tonnages of structural shapes and reinforcing bars. While sellers themselves report evidence of cutting of code levels on steel piling in a few instances, these are not confirmed. Nut and bolt producers have granted an additional 10 per cent discount to jobbers for carload quantities, while a change in the method of quoting seamless boiler tubes benefits the intermediate users, and advances the price to smaller consumers.

Tubize to Make Rayon in Brazil

Yearly Production Will Be From Six to Eight Million Pounds.

New York, June 16.—J. E. Bassill, president of the Tubize Chatillon Corporation, announced today that a contract had been entered into between Klabin, Irmacs & Co. and S. A. Fabrica Votorantim of the United States of Brazil and the Tubize Chatillon Corporation, to form a company for the manufacture and sale of nitro-cellulose rayon in Brazil. It is expected that the new company, to be known as the Companhia Nitro Chimica Brasileira, will be able to produce from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 pounds of rayon annually for the Brazilian market.

The Tubize company will assign and transfer to the new company certain machinery and equipment now located at its Hopewell, Va., plant, and which has been idle since July 1, 1934. This machinery will be dismantled and shipped to Brazil, where it will be erected in plant buildings to be built by the new company.

In exchange for its machinery and equipment, the Tubize company will receive a cash consideration and a 40 per cent stock interest in the new company. The interest taken by the Brazilian associates will be paid for in cash. Tubize will hereafter concentrate all its rayon manufacture in the United States at its Rome, Ga., plant. The Hopewell knitting plant is not involved in this deal.

Virginia Wheat Sells At 25-Cent Premium

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 16.—Virginia wheat has been selling for 20 to 25 cents more a bushel than the grain from the Northwestern States because Virginia farmers do not produce enough for home consumption, and the price, therefore, is the cost of Western wheat plus freight, storage and other charges, Henry Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, said today. On May 15 the price was 72 in Oregon and 74 in Washington State and the Virginia quotation was 99.

British Trade Surges Ahead In Boom Style

France Feels Franc Is Safe; Supplies Prove German Problem.

New York, June 16.—Cables and wireless dispatches to Business Week give the following survey of business abroad for the week ended today:

London (Cable). — "Britain changed cabinets last week without a ripple. Real reason is that only a few positions are shifted, and this had been expected for some time. Also, party squabbles of the last few months greatly strengthen the position of a coalition government. Finally, London is cheered up by the prospect of a $175,000,000 five-year rail electrification program which will employ many, give a fillip to spending.

"Although British stock markets, trade figures and unemployment have stood up well to a series of external shocks, everything is governed still by three factors—Berlin, Paris and Washington.

"Domestically, two cheerful facts stand out: that all the industrial companies now reporting maintain the unexpectedly large increases of profit that have marked 1935; and that the flood of new capital issues continues. Taking stock markets as the only criterion, one would say that the country is surging forward into a boom."

Paris (Wireless).—"France has a new government, and for the time being the franc is once more comparatively safe.

"Pierre Laval has formed a government. It has asked for, and received from parliament, complete freedom to decree whatever laws are necessary to meet the financial emergency without waiting for the usual prolonged debates in the Chamber. Two restrictions are imposed: parliament may not be dismissed, and the finance committee of the Senate and Chamber must be kept informed of all that the cabinet proposes doing; whatever decrees are necessary may be issued only until October 31, and they must be ratified by parliament before the end of the year."

Berlin (Wireless). — "The two main problems of Hitler's recovery program—supplies of imported raw materials and financing of public works and other employment schemes—are attracting wide interest. All attempts to refinance the rapidly growing floating debt by the issue of government bonds in the free capital market have failed. The government met the situation a few weeks ago through the quasi-voluntary 500,000,000 marks loan underwritten by the German savings banks. It is now the turn of private and social insurance institutions to take an amount that is expected to be only slightly lower, possibly 300,000,000 to 400,000,000 marks."

New York Factors To Maintain Code

Will Operate Under Same Wages and Hours.

New York, June 16.—The various factoring organizations of the City of New York, in a joint statement issued yesterday, announced that regardless of the decision of the Supreme Court rendering the NRA codes unconstitutional, they would continue to operate under the same conditions as provided in the voluntary agreement which had been in force during the existence of the national recovery act, as originally passed by Congress.

At a special meeting it was unanimously agreed:

"That the minimum wage scale which had been previously adopted by all the factors of the City of New York under a voluntary agreement with the NRA be continued.

"That the maximum hours of work, similarly agreed upon, be maintained.

"That the offices of the factors continue to be closed for business on Saturdays."

Bankers Flock To Rutgers for Unique Course

R. V. Fleming to Address Officer Students at Opening Tomorrow.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 16.—An innovation in educational cooperation between the banking and collegiate fields was taking concrete form here today with the arrivals of bankers from many parts of the country to enter the Graduate School of Banking which will open tomorrow under the joint auspices of the American Institute of Banking section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

Admission to the school is restricted to bank officers who are institute graduates, or to those who have the equivalent of these requirements, and out of several hundred applicants 200 have been qualified for the courses by the faculty committee on admissions.

Opening exercises will be held tomorrow night and the session of the school at the university will run through June 29. The banker students will be provided with living accommodations in the college dormitories and dining halls.

The resident session here will be supplemented by extension work for the students at their homes from August 1 to June 1, 1936. There will be similar schedules of resident and extension work for 1936 and 1937, with final examinations for diplomas at Rutgers University in June and July of the latter year. Members of Rutgers University faculty have accepted appointments on the administrative and teaching staff of the school.

Case and Lecture Method

The purpose of the school is announced as being to offer a comprehensive approach to an advanced study of the various administrative problems in banking and trust institutions. The teaching procedure will be a combination of the case system and the lecture discussion method. The curriculum embraces banking administrative problems and policies, bank investment problems, legal and managerial aspects of trust business, legal phases of bank administration and economic problems in the field of money and credit. It is planned to set up similar schools in cooperation with other universities in various parts of the country.

Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the board of the Irving Trust Co., New York City, and chairman of the board of regents of the school, will preside at the opening exercises. Addresses will be made by Harry J. Haas, vice president First National Bank, Philadelphia, who will speak for the board of regents; Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president Rutgers University, for the university; Robert V. Fleming, first vice president American Bankers Association and president Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C., for the association, and Richard Hill, secretary, American Institute of Banking and registrar of the school, for the administration of the school. Other speakers will be Leslie G. McDouall, president, New Jersey Bankers Association, Newark, who will bring greetings from that organization; Charles F. Ellery, president, American Institute of Banking, and Carl K. Withers, superintendant of banking for the State of New Jersey.

Tide Water Calls $19,624,600 Pfd.

Price Is Set at $105 Plus $1.25 Dividend.

New York, June 16.—E. L. Shea, president of Tide Water Oil Co., announces that all the company's outstanding 5 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of the par value of $100 per share, of which there are outstanding 196,246 shares, will be redemmed August 15 at $105 per share, plus a final quarterly dividend of $1.25 per share.

All dividends on the preferred stock called for redemption shall cease to accrue and all rights of holders thereof, except the right to receive the redemption price shall cease and determine from and after August 15. The stock transfer books will be permanently closed at close of business on August 7.

Fourteen More Banks Are Liquidated in May

The Comptroller of the Currency, J. F. T. O'Connor, announces that during May, 14 insolvent national banks were liquidated, the receiverships thereof being finally closed.

This makes a total of 65 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since his last annual report to Congress compiled as of October 31, 1934.

Financial Wringer Awaits Rail Reorganization Plans

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Although the railroad reorganization broth bubbled furiously the past week, most Wall Street experts agreed that the dish was not yet ready to be served.

Principal ingredients were: Sharp words by Chairman Jones, of the RFC on the tardiness of rehabilitation activities and a series of hectic meetings of railroad men, their bankers and rail creditors, including large bond holders such as insurance companies.

A round dozen of sizable carrier systems are scheduled for the financial "wringer," but most of them, it is said, are still in the squeezing process and promise to be for some time.

The casualty list includes the Missouri Pacific, the Rock Island, the St. Louis-San Francisco and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, all of which are in the hands of trustees under Section 77 of the new Federal bankruptcy act; the Seaboard Air Line and the Wabash, in charge of receivers, and a number of roads which have sought adjustments directly with their creditors without initial recourse to the courts.

Most recent additions to the latter group include the Chicago & North Western and the St. Paul, both of which have placed tentative plans for an easing of their interest burdens before their large creditors, most of whom are insurance companies holding their bonds. Among others which have handled their difficulties in the same fashion are the Denver, Rio Grande & Western, the Western Pacific and the Monon.

Finance, Business, Economics.

Stock Market Advance Selective as Buyers Favor Equities in Companies Whose Profit Margins Are Likely to Be Increased by Codes' End.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 16.—While industrial stock prices have risen into new high ground for the year under the stimulus of persistent investment buying, albeit in moderate volume, the stock market has been unusually selective in character. Many individual stocks, as well as certain whole groups of issues, have lagged behind or been left out of the advance entirely.

This is not at all surprising when we reflect upon the factors behind the current advance. Stocks prices have gone up in the face of an imminent seasonal recession in business, which many expect to be relatively severe, and a very disturbed legislative situation in Washington. While the underlying stimulus of extremely easy credit conditions doubtless constitutes the most convincing single explanation of the rise, higher prices must also be attributed to concrete expectations of larger profits for many industrial concerns.

Easy money conditions give investors the wherewithal in the form of idle bank balances to purchase stocks. They explain the willingness to accept unusually low yields on dividend-paying stocks, in some cases lower than those obtained in 1929. They explain why investors are willing to overlook immediate business conditions to some extent, in the belief that the plentiful supplies of bank credit available will in time bring about a major rise in the rate of business activity.

Concerns in Strategic Position Face Large Profits Rise.

In addition, however, many security analysis believe that a number of corporations will enjoy substantial increases in their profits, almost regardless of what happens to business in general. This applies in particular to concerns that occupy a strategic position in their industries, which are able to maintain the selling prices of their products or services at relatively stable levels even without the support of NRA codes.

The elimination of the codes will enable such enterprises to make substantial reductions in their costs in many instances. To some extent these may be obtained through modification of labor relations, even where wage scales and working conditions are not directly affected. Many code provisions affecting employes were responsible for a substantial increase in wage costs, which can now be eliminated.

Far more important in most cases, however, is the ability of such concerns to purchase their raw materials and needed supplies more cheaply as a result of the abrogation of the NRA codes. A striking example of this is furnished in the case of coal. The soft-coal price structure has collapsed in many producing areas as a result of the ending of the coal code. Large coal consumers are thus obtaining their fuel at lower prices than have prevailed for some time past. The same applies to such products as lumber, while in the case of copper, steel and similar products there is no certainty among purchasing agents that the existing price structure can be maintained much longer.

In other words, the elimination of the NRA has tended to make less equal the strategic bargaining position of various industries and individual enterprises. Especially in the case of industries where small and financially weak enterprises predominate, examples of which are coal mining and lumber producing, large buyers are in much better position now to force price concessions. Purchasing agents of large industrial concerns say they are moving cautiously, not desiring to precipitate too spectacular a breakdown in prices, but they are confident that average costs of their materials and supplies will decline through the balance of the year.

Railroad Earnings Outlook Improves Also.

The fact that railroad stocks had joined the upswing in industrials late last week may be ascribed largely to this same line of reasoning. Railroad rates are not affected by the breakdown of the NRA. In fact, as a result of the rate increases granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission earlier this year and elimination of pension bill, railroad earnings will be increased at the estimated rate of $130,000,000 annually. This will be largely offset by the two wage increases which went into effect on January 1 and April 1, which increased the annual wage bill by almost $120,000,000.

The collapse of the NRA will now mean additional material savings to the railroads. The railway coal bill alone exceeded $178,000,000 in 1934. It may now drop back to the 1933 level of $150,000,000, involving a material saving to the carriers. Furthermore, Congress is expected to pass some part of the program advocated by the President for applying a measure of Federal regulation to highway and water carriers, thus checking further diversion of traffic to these competing means of transportation and aiding the railroads to regain some part of the business already lost to them. Of course, any improvement in general business will bring heavier traffic and so larger earnings.

On the other hand, investors and speculators are naturally tending to avoid those enterprises which are in weak strategic position, and so are likely to be injured by the abandonment of the codes and the resulting freer play given competitive forces. They are also fearful of industries which still face destructive legislation, such as the public utilities. But strong and efficient concerns that have demonstrated their ability to show large earnings without the aid of codes in the past, such as leading enterprises in the can, chemical, tobacco, automobile and other manufacturing industries, are likely to benefit materially from their ability to reduce costs following the ending of the codes.

Mo. Pac. Loss Is $14,201,818

1934 Deficit Exceeds That of Previous Year by $1,147,741.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—The Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. reported today net loss after all charges for 1934 of $14,201,818 compared with net loss of $13,054,477 in 1933.

L. W. Baldwin, trustee for the company, said that the volume of traffic continues below normal. "Expectation of material improvement during 1935 is not warranted at this time," he added.

Total railway operating revenues for the year were $73,435,590, compared with $67,953,779 in 1933, an increase of 8.07 per cent. Total railway operating expense increased $5,933,006 or 11.3 per cent.

The report included adjustments affecting operations prior to bankruptcy, "in order to preserve the continuity of the annual records for comparative purposes," it was explained.

Insurance Stocks Make Sharp Rise

Bank Securities Also Gain in Week.

New York, June 16.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market rose sharply during the past week to close at a new 1935 high, according to figures compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on June 14 amounted to $569,308,000, against $543,175,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase for the week of $26,133,000, or 4.81 per cent. The previous 1935 high, reached on May 27, was $54,679,000, and the low for the year, reached on March 14, was $484,613,000.

New York City bank stocks continued to gain during the past week. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues totaled $1,321,025,000 on June 14 compared with $1,308,457,000 on June 7, an increase for the week of $12,568,000, or 0.96 per cent.

Electricity Sales Up 3.9% in Year

New York, June 16.—Total revenue of the electric light and power industry for April was $136,060,100, comparing with $140,851,700 in the same month last year, an increase of 4.1 per cent, according to the Edison Electric Institute. For the year ended on April 30, revenues were $1,885,036,200, against $1,794,903,400 in the preceding year, a gain of 3.9 per cent. Average annual consumption of a domestic consumer was 842 kilowatt-hours, against 809 the year before, and average revenue for a unit was 5.23 cents, against 5.42 cents.

Postal Holders Are Organizing For Protection

Two More Committees Formed to Safeguard Investments.

New York, June 16.—A preferred stockholders' protective committee has been formed at the request of holders of substantial amounts of the 7 per cent noncumulative preferred stock of Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation, following the filing of a petition by the company to reorganize under section 77B of the bankruptcy act. The committee is headed by Joseph P. Ripley, president, Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., as chairman, and includes George M. Hendrie, Hamilton, Ontario; John V. D. McMaster, financial secretary, Great American Insurance Co., and George A. Price, secretary and treasurer, American Arch Co.

Holders of the collateral trust bonds and debenture stocks united yesterday to safeguard their interests as a result of the impending default by the corporation of the semiannual interest on its $50,000,000 obligations. The chairman of the committee, which has deferred the solicitation of deposits pending further developments, is Cecil P. Stewart, president of Frank B. Hall & Co., insurance and shipping official.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH AND CABLE CORPORATION

Twenty-Five Year Collateral Trust 5% Gold Bonds and Twenty-Five Year Collateral Trust 5% Debenture stock (the same by which aforesaid bonds are designated in the British Empire).

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE AFORE-MENTIONED SECURITIES:

On June 14, 1935, a petition for the Reorganization of the Company under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act was filed by the Company in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.

The undersigned have been asked by holders of substantial amounts of the above described bonds to serve as a Committee to protect the interests of such bondholders.

It will be the policy of the Committee to protect the interests of the bondholders exclusively and to see that the substantial value of the collateral which was behind the bonds when they were issued is preserved.

The Committee represents no interest identified either with the International Telephone & Telegraph Company which controls the subject company through stock ownership, or with the bankers who underwrote and brought out this issue of bonds except that a member of this Committee was formerly an officer of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company but has no connection with it now.

The problems of the company involve not only questions of private business but matters of public policy. The condition of competition in the communications industry is the most pressing problem confronting bondholders. With this in mind the Committee is pledged to minimize the present appalling wastefulness in the communications industry.

The Committee has for two months past been preparing for organization and studying the situation in contemplation of a possible default and reorganization proceedings.

The Committee is prepared to do and is doing its utmost to formulate a constructive program for the reorganization of the company's properties which will reinstate it to the position it should occupy in the communications industry, and strengthen the security of the bondholders as originally contemplated.

The Committee believes that one of the reasons for the creation of the Federal Communications Commission by Congress was to effect such coordination among the Communications Companies as would be for the best interests of the national economy. A report has been made by that Commission to Congress in which permissive legislation is suggested in order to facilitate combinations in the Communications field subject to the supervision of the Federal Communications Commission. It will be the object of this Committee to bring about developments of a constructive nature with relation to the coordination of all communications companies either under such program or under another program which the Committee may deem as more advisable.

Considering the public nature of the company's difficulties and the fact that this problem is a problem of public and governmental policy as well, this Committee believes that the bondholders may be best represented by an independent group so diversified as to include the experience and technical skill necessary to aid in a successful reorganization which will rehabilitate the company.

The Committee represents no banking interests. A place is being reserved on the Committee for a representative of the English interests.

The undersigned Committee will be in close contact with the court proceedings, with the company's business operations, and with governmental agencies, and will be active in reorganization plans. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York has a most constructive record in situations of this type. To facilitate the action of the court this Committee intends to place before the court such constructive ideas and suggestions so as to give the court adequate material for the exercise of its powers. Deposits of bonds and debenture stocks are not sought at this time, since we regard it as inadvisable to solicit such deposits pending further developments.

Holders of bonds are invited to notify the Assistant Secretary of this Committee of their names, addresses and the amounts of their respective holdings so that their interests may be protected without delay. The Committee will communicate with such holders from time to time and will keep them informed not only of their legal rights in the court proceedings but of the progress made in reaching the objectives the Committee has set for itself.

Investors Find Income Quest Difficult Task

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—With the Nation's metallic monetary base—both gold and silver—swelling to the unprecedented total of nearly $10,000,000,000 Wall Street believes that credit inflation may be starting to make itself felt in the securities markets.

At any rate, the stock market has more than recovered from its setback coincident to the NRA upset, and industrial shares have surged up to the highest average level since 1931. Capital is still wary of new enterprises, but corporations are again scurrying to the bond market to replace outstanding obligations with new bonds bearing lower rates of interest.

Reserves at Record.

Investors, both individual and institutional, are being harder pressed to find profitable employment for their funds. With a gold influx of more than $200,000,000 in the past fortnight, excess bank reserves, which are earning their owners nothing, have pushed up to a new record high around $2,500,000,000.

Bank lending remains at low levels, with the demand for business credit still light. But the log jam in credit for building purposes appears to be moving. F. W. Dodge Corporation has reported that residential building contracts let in May in 37 States were the highest in 3½ years, and exceeded the total of May of last year by 81 per cent. The total was still but a fraction of what was considered "normal" in the post-war decade, but the change of trend was striking.

The heavy or capital goods industries generally remain rather depressed. Steel production has fallen to 39 per cent of capacity, according to last week's estimate of the Steel Institute. Heavy construction is light, and railway equipment buying has all but petered out. Nevertheless, rail earnings improved in the latest month. Manufacturers of new equipment insist that it is so much more efficient that it will pay for itself within a few years, and methods of financing replacement are under consideration.

Promised the whole-hearted support of workers and politicians and counting on the army, the youngest president in Mexico's history appeared to be in an invincible position.

Calles, Mexico's "strong man," opposed Cardenas' economic policies, only to find his strength apparently ran suddenly disappeared.

The president was expected to form a cabinet tomorrow to succeed the one he forced to resign in order that the government could carry out its program unhampered by opposition within.

Although the president received thousands of messages of congratulation, Calles, whose strength only four days ago seemed unlimited, remained in virtual solitude at Cuernavaca, visited only by a few friends.

It appeared likely that Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, retiring minister of war, and Gen. Saturnino Cedillo are slated for iumportant posts in the new cabinet. They are considered to be the two strongest generals in Mexico. Although they are known to disapprove of the anti-religious policies, the remainder of the cabinet is expected to be composed of men who share the 40-year-old Cardenas' views.

Baldwin Scouts Lloyd George's New Deal Plan

Prime Minister Will Drop Scheme to Follow U. S., London Hears.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 16.—Political circles learned today Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin has decided to reject Lloyd George's proposed new deal for Great Britain.

The new premier, it was understood, reached the opinion that the veteran Libral leader's plans for speeding up the economic recovery of the nation do not offer any advantages over the government's own program, which Baldwin considers has been highly satisfactory.

A cabinet committee appointed by former Premier Ramsay MacDonald has been studying the new deal, much of it taken from President Roosevelt's program, for several months, meeting often with Lloyd George.

Huge Cost Is Feared.

Neither the World War premier nor his experts were able to stir up much enthusiasm among the ministers. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, especially looked askance at the large sums which would be necessary for carrying out many of the schemes to eliminate unemployment.

The Welshman's program was headed by creation of a powerful "brain trust," which would operate without political interference. Parliament would legislate only on general conditions.

It included a new financial policy, slum clearance and land settlement programs and international cooperation in finance.

Roosevelt Courage Praised.

In introducing his plan Lloyd George referred to President Roosevelt as "a man of indomitable courage."

Baldwin will be asked a question in the House of Commons tomorrow about the New Deal, but regardless of his reply, both the cabinet committee and Lloyd George expect shortly to issue statements explaining their respective views.

Political quarters had recognized that adoption of Lloyd George's plans would be a big help to the government in the next general election, for the Welshman still has a following among some Liberal groups.

Parliament Meets Today.

What effect Baldwin's rejection will have on the plans is unclear, but it was noted the Welsh leader last week helped launch a new nonpartisan campaign for support of the new deal in the next parliament as well as a new foreign policy aimed at an effective peace.

Parliament starts on its last lap tomorrow. The session is expected to end in August, with the general elections in September or October.

When the House of Commons reassembles tomorrow one of the most important matters will be a statement by Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, on the Sino-Japanese situation. It is believed he will reveal whether the government is planning any action under existing treaties or the League of Nations.

14 Road Foremen Shifted From Jobs

Washington County Men Go to New Posts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 16.—Changes in the personnel of the State roads commission in Washington County were announced today by Charles Rinehart, county road supervisor. Fourteen new road foreman were named to replace as many who were relieved of these duties, but not discharged.

It was announced by the roads commission that no road workers under the merit system would be discharged, except officials, whose offices would be abolished. Workers have been or will be moved back to ranks they held under the merit system. In many of the counties, persons who were classified as chauffeurs, steam roller men, etc., under the merit system were holding foreman posts, an official of the commission said. Many of these already have been moved back into their classifications.

Man Laughs at Youths in Holdup; Shot Dead

New York, June 16.—Three bootblacks, Frank Damata, 13; his brother, Joseph, 11, and Libson Lawrence, 12., a colored boy, filched a policeman's pistol and subsequently shot and killed William Walsh when he laughed at their command to "stick 'em up," police, holding the lads, said today.

Walsh was found dying today in a vacant lot. The trio will be arraigned Monday on homicide charges in the same children's court where Frank and Joseph were paroled last June 4 on charges of robbing a tavern of $140.

U. S. Prepares To Shift FDIC To Permanency

Unless Bank Bill Passes by July 1 Guaranty Limit Will Be Doubled.

By the Associated Press.

Steps necessary to shift Federal deposit insurance from a temporary to permanent basis were taken yesterday by Federal banking authorities.

Apparently proceeding on belief the Administration banking bill will not become law by July 1, the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Deposit Insurance Corporation moved to put into effect provisions of the original guaranty act which otherwise will obtain full force on that day.

Two differences between the present temporary plan and the permanent system were outstanding: The 100 per cent insurance on deposits would be boosted from $5,000 to $10,000, and banks belonging to the corporation would have an unlimited liability to the fund.

Unopposed insurance provisions of the omnibus bill, still locked in the Senate Banking Committee, would make the $5,000 guaranty figure permanent and replace the unlimited liability with a fixed assessment based on deposits.

In preparation for the payment plan, the Reserve board has prescribed for its member banks regulations to be used in defining "deposits," and the Comptroller of the Currency, and insurance corporation, have forwarded application blanks for use in applying for class A stock.

In order to obtain benefits of the permanent insurance, every bank which is a member of the temporary fund must become a class A stockholder of the corporation on or before July 1, to an amount equal to one-fourth of 1 per cent of deposits.

Munitions Race Called Essential To Peace Reign

Hope Virtually Abandoned for Early Arms Cut in Europe.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 16.—Europe is pouring millions into men and machines and there was little prospect today of an abatement of the land and air armaments race.

Great Britain's defense building program finds this government, customarily Europe's leader in disarmament, in step, or rapidly trying to get into step, with the others.

The expenditure of £23,000,000 (approximately $115,000,000) for air defense this year has been announced, with the prospect this sum will be greatly increased next year. An additional £100,000,000 is being spent this year on the navy and army.

"Adequate strength is the most effective deterrent of war and the expansion of our air force is not a panic measure," said Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, minister of air, in defending the program. "We will work for limitation of armaments, for an air pact and for peace, but we can not hope to obtain these objectives until our own strength is adequate."

France in Race.

Although France hopes to get Germany into a network of peace pacts, she is appropriating 10,622,000,000 francs (approximately $690,430,000) for air, land and sea armaments and 3,331,000,000 more francs are authorized or are pending in Parliament.

The air ministry promises 1,000 more "front line" fighting planes by the end of the year, which would mean further increases by England and Germany on the basis of pledges made by their leaders. The French parliament has authorized another 26,500-ton cruiser and two 35,000-ton battleships to match those built by Italy.

Germany is leaving no stone unturned in arming against her neighbors, but exact information is withheld. Land and air rearmaments have been going on secretly for more than two years while the first units of the new Nazi navy, in contravention of the Treaty of Versailles, have been laid down.

550,000 Under Arms.

The recent military conscription degree will provide a peace-time army of 550,000 men while another 300,000 will be in semimilitary labor service. This total would be far greater than any other western European army.

Premier Mussolini has placed 1,000,000 men under arms, is laying down a large fleet and is building a formidable air force numbering 1,500 planes. The Anglo-Italian controversy over Italy's Ethiopian program, it is feared, has destroyed the "united front" adopted at the recent Stresa conference by London, Rome and Paris.

Poland is maintaining a strong armed force to protect her frontiers. Lithuania, because of the tenseness of relations with Germany, is said to be moving troops from the Polish to the German borders. The Danubian countries have increased their defense budgets, while Czechoslovakia is striving to obtain further security through a pact with Russia.

The Case Of Mr. Holt.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections has voted 10 to 4 to recommend the seating of Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia, when he has attained his thirtieth birthday. The vote was strictly and suspiciously partisan, with only one Democrat joining the Republican minority and another refusing to vote until he had had time to consider more fully the constitutional issues involved.

If all the majority committee members had been as concerned about the constitutional aspects of the Holt case, as they were about gaining another Democratic vote they probably would have recommended disqualification of the youthful Senator-elect. Certainly that course would have been taken, if the Senate Committee on Elections had followed the precedent established a few years ago when William Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, was appointed to succeed the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow.

At that time the question as to when an individual elected to the Senate really becomes a Senator was squarely raised. Mr. Morrow had died without having had an opportunity to be sworn in after his election. Instead of deciding that another election should have been held, the Senate, in confirming Mr. Barbour's appointment, agreed that Mr Morrow had become a Senator when the term of his predecessor expired. Senator Pittman pointed out that newly elected Senators receive pay, secure office space, maintain secretaries and transact business in their official capacity before Congress convenes.

The opinion that a senator's term of office begins on the day his predecessor withdraws is further confirmed by the language of the twentieth amendment to the Constitution.

Since Mr. Holt was not 30 years of age when the term for which he was elected began at noon January 3, West Virginia has been deprived for nearly six months of her constitutional right to be represented by two Senators. The question arises, therefore, as to what would happen if some day an enthusiastic electorate should decide to cast its ballots for an infant prodigy. Would the Senate confirm him when he reached the constitutional age of discretion, in conformity with the precedent which the Committee on Elections is now seeking to establish? A mere difference in time certainly would not affect the principles involved.

The issues raised in the Holt case are too important to be treated as a matter for partisan action. The Constitution states senatorial qualifications plainly. The Senate has had opportunity to decide upon the other moot questions involved. Unless it intends to reverse itself and to ignore the spirit, if not the letter of the Constitution, it will scrutinize the Holt case more carefully than its committee has done

A Larger Objective.

Everywhere, the chief travail of travel has been xenophobia: the hatred—or, at all events, the fleecing—of strangers. When, in 1916, American troops arrived on the American shore of the Rio Grande, the local American shopkeepers promptly raised every price above every requirement of the laws of petty trade. Likewise, shortsighted Europeans have taken all they could get away from the tourist, with no thought of how this process might dampen his desires for further journeying. It is pleasant to be able to list a change of attitude among the scant improvements of these present lean days.

Some while ago, France officially awakened to the fact that the foreign tourist is a source of national revenue and should be cultivated as such: the French government established a Department of Tourism under its Ministry of Public Works. Now this department is adding protection to cultivation. The cables say that the government has established, through meticulous survey, an approved list of hotels which it recommends to tourists. Charges are to be elaborately publicized, and, upon any traveler's substantiated accusation of overcharging, the guilty hostelry will be immediately stricken from the list and advertised as a gouger. What's more, a similar service is going into operation as regards taxi-drivers, porters and other possible offenders.

Neighbor nations followed France in her first step toward the official organization of "tourism;" it is to be hoped that they will follow her in these later strides. It may even be hoped that some part of the lesson will be learned in some parts of America. The tourist, native or foreign, is a golden fleece. Why fleece him?

Another CWA?

Asked at a recent press conference whether the work-relief program is not degenerating into another CWA, Secretary Ickes' reply was: "Let's go on to the next question."

There is, realistically speaking, no other question worth going on to until this fundamental issue has been settled. The CWA experiment was so wasteful in conception, so poorly administered in execution, and so devoid of constructive results as to make any indication of its repetition a matter of urgent national concern. Not far short of a billion dollars was spent on the undertaking between November 16, 1933, and March 31, 1934. None has ever even attempted to argue that its accomplishments were commensurate with the expenditure involved.

When the work-relief bill was introduced, last January, there was no intimation that its $4,880,000,000 appropriation might become merely another CWA debauch. There was, it is true, no definition of the way in which the money would be spent, nor even any determination of the general principles which should guide its expenditure. But the assumption on the part of Congress was that at least the lessons of experience would be utilized in guiding the enormous outlay. This assumption was partially justified by the categories of proposed projects which the President furnished the Senate, when that body refused to follow the House lead by appropriating without any prior investigation. These projects were on the whole useful undertakings.

The President, however, has set himself the goal of taking 3,500,000 unemployed off the relief rolls, for a period of one year and at an expenditure of some four billion dollars. Simple arithmetic shows that this means an outlay of little over $1,000 a year per unemployed man, if the objective is to be maintained. And this average, even with wages kept well below CWA standards, which is assured, indicates that most of the projects undertaken will be made work. The idea of "priming the pump" through heavy Governmental expenditures on materials has been dropped.

That made work is to be the order of the work-relief program is further indicated by the way in which the National Resources Board is being excluded from participation in the development of the new layout. This organization, which was known as the National Planning Board until the word "planning" acquired a slightly sour flavor, was appointed by Secretary Ickes almost two years ago. It has worked hard first to establish State planning boards in the various States, and then to coordinate into a national program their careful researches into local public work projects. Most Government officials assumed that these preliminary labors would bear fruit under the new work-relief program. Now it appears that, over the protest of Secretary Ickes, the National Resources Board is to be disregarded—just at the moment when it is asking Congress for an extension of its powers.

Moreover the theory on which the new Works Progress Administration is working is diametrically opposed to that followed by the National Resources Board. The latter sought decentralization, with continuous emphasis on State control and direction. The new organization headed by Frank Walker, and directed by Harry Hopkins and his aids, is all for centralization, a theory in which the meeting of State Governors at Biloxi, Miss., has now meekly acquiesced. This centralization of spending authority in itself goes far to indicate that the CWA outline is going to be followed, as of course the politicians want.

It may be argued that the necessity of keeping down costs in order to spread employment is mainly responsible for this outcome. But that fails to explain why all the past effort to adapt relief expenditure to our basic political structure is being sabotaged The Hopkins philosophy is diametrically opposed to the constitutional principles which the Supreme Court reaffirmed in the Schechter case. And it threatens to get around and undermine those principles by an unbridled use of spending power which Congress probably had no right to delegate to the Administration.

Too High A Price.

When the United Mine Workers gave formal notice of their intention to strike for shorter hours and higher wages, John L. Lewis, president of the union, said that enactment of the Guffey coal stabilization bill would stop the strike. Two days before the strike was due to begin, President Roosevelt announced that he indorses the bill in principle and hopes that Congress will approve it. This statement followed shortly after Mr. Lewis had issued from a conference with the President which resulted in an agreement to postpone the strike for two weeks. Meantime, will pressure be brought to bear upon Congress to bow to the mandate of the United Mine Workers by accepting the Guffey bill?

If legislation desired by organized labor could be assured of passage by relying upon the tactics followed in this instance, Congress would soon cease to be an independent law-making body and become the subervient agency for recording the wishes of special groups and classes. For that reason, passage of the Guffey bill, seemingly to forestall a strike, would constitute an extremely dangerous precedent. Regardless of its merits—and it is open to criticism both on constitutional and economic grounds—the Administration should avoid even the appearance of yielding to coercion by urging Congress to enact this controversial measure. Industrial peace is precious, but it is possible to buy it at too high a price.

China's Last Stand.

Ever since Japan began her conquest of Manchuria in 1931 the Chinese government has followed a conciliatory policy. For a brief period President Chiang Kai-Shek's troops resisted the Japanese at Shanghai and in the northern provinces, but these battles were only an interlude in the general trend toward acceptance of Japanese domination. The authorities at Nanking realize that their poorly-equipped and undisciplined recruits are no match for the Japanese army. Consequently, they have tried to avoid open hostilities by gradually yielding to Tokyo's demands.

In view of the internal dissension in China and the weakness of the Nanking government, this policy may be readily defended by those patriots who are working toward national unity. Yet it has played directly into the hands of the Japanese. As soon as China has accepted one set of demands another has been presented as a test of Chinese "sincerity." Each fresh encroachment finds China less able to resist than before. The result is, of course, gradual extension of Japanese control without effective resistance.

China's hope of achieving national unity has already been shattered, and her national independence is hanging in the balance. If the latest demands of Japan should be accepted, China would become a vassal state subject to ultimate control from Tokyo. Moreover, it is apparent that the area north of the Yellow River, including the two strategic cities of Peiping and Tientsin, is going the way of Manchuria. Where will the Japanese invasion stop? China does not know. She faces the dismal alternatives of resisting with what strength she can command or risking extinction as an independent nation.

It is this desperate situation which has brought forth a new appeal for aid to the Western powers. The foreign ministry at Nanking is trying to minimize the importance of the conversations in foreign capitals, for Japan has threatened China with "serious consequences" if the nine-power pact should be invoked. Nanking probably sees in this treaty, however, the last possibility of arresting the invasion. The militarists of Japan may penalize China for her efforts, but even weak resistance in a cause that is so eminently right is preferable to ignominious surrender.

The extension of Japanese control over Hopei, Chahar, Shansi and parts of northern Shantung, Honan and Suiyuan is unquestionably a violation of the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the independence and territorial integrity of China. When the puppet state of Manchukuo was established, Japan offered the excuse that this region was not a part of China proper. What can she say with regard to the present encroachment upon the ancient Chinese capital and adjacent territory that has been under control of Chinese governments for at least 2,000 years?

Japan is anxious to keep this question in the background, for it involves conclusive evidence of Japanese aggression. For the same reason, however, the Chinese must press it to the fore. And if organized efforts to prevent imperialistic conquests and preserve world peace mean anything, it is impossible to see how the signatories to the nine-power pact can ignore China's appeal.

The Uses Of Adversity.

In the weekly news review section of The Sunday Post were two heartening pictures. One was of a serious-faced youth, pencil in hand, who had just sold a play to the Theatre Guild for production this fall. The other was of a young American father and mother, holding their three children, and looking very pleased that the heavyweight championship of the world has come to their house to stay—that is, until a better man comes along.

The first impression is that there is nothing very noteworthy about either of these two feats of brain and brawn. Plays are being written every day and many of them are sold. And surely no king wears his crown more uneasily or with less certainty of keeping it than a leather-mittened champ. But the inspiring part about the climb to fame of Robert Turney, the playwright, and James Braddock, the boxer, is that less than a year ago both were on relief rolls. Today, by dint of sheer courage and imagination, they are basking in the light of fame and fortune.

Theirs is no overnight success except in a figurative way. No one could possibly lay Braddock's defeat of Baer to the luck of the Irish. Nor should aspiring playwrights forget that Turney worked for 14 years on his play, which he wrote entirely in longhand. And while the fighter owes his victory in the strictest sense of the word to brawn and the writer to brain, both have in common that essential quality of courage which "glory doth follow."

No Holes In Swiss Purse.

From the Denver Rocky Mountain News.

Wise Switzerland kept out of the World War. And by keeping her finances sound, she avoided the post-war monetary inflation that blotted up the savings of neighboring peoples in France, Germany, Austria and Italy.

This almost pure democracy of the Alps has just decided by a referendum vote of 570,302 to 424,033 to keep out of the threatened monetary war which already has toppled cabinets in France and Belgium.

Life is not easy in the Alps. But by hard work and wise self-government, thrifty Swiss folk earn their living and make provision for security in old age. Life, for the moment, could be made easier by the expedient of cheapening the Swiss franc to increase exports of cheese and watches. But apparently they are too far-sighted to entrust their old-age insurance to the whims of a printing press.

XXII Amendment?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Believing in the Constitution of the United States as the most effective framework of popular government the world has yet devised, and seeing in it the essential spirit of the founding fathers, we can nevertheless realize that it was limited by the economic conditions of their day.

From time to time we have purged it of those clauses which so obviously violated the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, so as to bring the whole standard up to the spirit of the Preamble, without disturbing its form.

Once more we have reached a point where readjustments of some sort seem necessary in order that the "unfinished work" may be carried on, and it is to be hoped that once more these readjustments can be made within our constitutional framework.

Today the vital issue is one of employment—the right of everyone to work. For years millions of our people have been deprived of this right—deprived of this portion of their pursuit of happiness. Is it not high time to get back to fundamentals, and to see to it that each and every one in this rich and fertile country of ours is given a full opportunity to exercise the God-given faculty of making a living?

The following amendment to the Constitution would, without in any way impairing the basic structure of our form of government, permit the elected representatives of the people to provide such employment in productive industries, as well as in public works.

The Congress shall have power to provide for the employment of all citizens of the United States, or of the Territories thereof, who desire such employment, by establishing (or acquiring) and operating such shops, mills, factories and other industrial plants as may be required for this purpose, and also to provide for the disposal of the products of such industries through public markets or stores; but no such industry or store shall be established or operated by the United States in any State without the consent of the Legislature of that State.

EVELYN SMITH.

Seeking A Lincoln.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Your cartoon in The Post of June 12 depicting the G. O. P. in elephantine symbol, sitting under the thin foliage of a truncated oak tree furnishing the only available shade in the parched desert, indulging the lament, "Oh, for an Abraham Lincoln," aptly typifies the spirit of the recent "Grass-Roots" conference. The patches on the knees of the elephant show that he has recently arisen from an attitude of prayer for a deliverer. But, judging from the outcome of the conference, which expressed itself merely in protest, nothing more, convinces us that no Abraham Lincoln was forthcoming.

It did seem entirely proper and fitting that the "Grand Old Party," in quest of newness of life and spirit, should resort to the home and tomb of its first President and greatest exemplar of its principles. The Midwestern States played the leading role in the pre-Presidential campaign of 1860, as they now assume to do in the election of 1936, three-quarters of a century later. The issue then hinged upon the Dred Scott decision, as it now hinges upon the NRA verdict of the Supreme Court. Abraham Lincoln, the mouthpiece and oracle of the Republican Party in his day, denounced the decision and appealed to the people to reverse it. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom let us call the Abraham Lincoln of the present day, is confronted with a similar situation. Unless the NRA verdict is nullified or reversed, the "New Deal" is doomed just as the cause of human liberty would have been hopelessly upset had not the Dred Scott decision been overthrown. Will the people uphold the hand of Roosevelt now as they did that of Abraham Lincoln in' 1860?

A Political Question?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This whole controversy, relative to the Supreme Court declaring the national industrial recovery act unconstitutional, in all probability could have been avoided had the Government contended that the whole matter was either a political, or in the nature of a political question, and not a judicial one. In view of the fact, that not only did a national emergency exist, but that domestic tranquillity was threatened and the general welfare dangerously affected, it was a matter exclusively for the legislative and executive branches of the Government, as the judicial branch is without power to determine political questions, or questions in the nature of political questions.

Forgotten Jurists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is regrettable that the three judicial celebrities, namely, Chief Justices Hughes, Taft and Marshall, depicted in the pediment adorning the front, or the western entrance, to the new United States Supreme Court Building, were not accompanied by the first Chief Justice John Jay, who served from 1789 to 1795; Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, who served from 1864 to 1873, and Chief Justice Edward D. White, who not only served from 1910 to 1921, after having been appointed by the late President William Howard Taft, Republican, but was appointed an Associate Justice, by the late President Grover Cleveland, Democrat, in 1894, in which capacity he served until 1910. Altogether, this renowned Chief Justices served 27 continuous years on the bench, after having been a conspicuous, leading and distinguished United States Representative and United States Senator from the State of Louisiana.

The three excluded celebrities presided over the world's greatest judicial tribunal, in three of the most momentous periods in the history of the Nation, and should not have been forgotten, overlooked or ignored. The fact is, in my humble judgment, only Chief Justices or Associate Justices should have been depicted in the pediment of the new United States Temple of Justice, which bears on the front the inscription, "Equal Justice Under Law."

The motive for excluding the three learned in the law, just and famous jurists, who donned the judicial ermine with dignity, glory and honor, is incomprehensible.

Another Angle On The U. Of M.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading a letter to the editor entitled, "The U. of M. Still Flourishes," in your issue of June 10, I could not help taking exception to some of the broad generalizations which the writer makes without the least attempt to support them.

She states quite definitely that the agitation is "at bottom largely political," despite the fact that it has been pointed out several times that, although the student body has almost doubled since the present executive assumed his duties, the number of full professors has actually decreased by at least two, and that the teaching burden has been shouldered by lower paid and lesser qualified instructors.

Those who started this agitation, whom the writer endears with the phrase, "vociferous malcontents," have even been so specific as to name six prominent professors who left the university under the present regime and whose places have not been filled with men of comparable qualifications.

These arguments indicate that the agitation is at bottom largely scholastic, but the writer of the flourishing letter of June 10 would have it otherwise.

With another flourish, she says that the popularity of the university is indicated by its increasing enrollment, particularly from the District, where there are "four excellent universities." We caution her not to fall into the error of "post hoc ergo propter hoc." In other words, we ask that she consider whether or not there may not be other motivating forces which determine a student's selection of a university. It is very conceivable, for instance, that the expense involved might play some part.

She admits, however, that the university is growing up and "needs new clothes," but implies, with still another flourish, that all this growing up has taken place since the budget cut of 1933, when she gives this as the reason for the university's failing to get these "new clothes."

Again we point out that, even before the budget cut of 1933, the faculty did not increase in proportion to the increase in the student body. As a matter of fact, the six professors whom we have mentioned all left and were replaced by less well-qualified men before the budget cut. In short, there has never been any perceptible effort on the part of the present administrator to build up a faculty commensurate with the size and importance of the university. On the contrary, it has been in the faculty, constituting, as it does, the most vital part of any university, where the savings have been made.

The writer then launches into an impressive peroration, in which there appear to be so many learned scholars on the faculty that one or two could fall into Paint Branch or get locked in the Coliseum after a basket ball game and never be missed; internationally famous scholars meander about the campus, unheralded and unsung, and textbooks "emanate" from every department and in no time at all are put to use by colleges and universities all over the country.

"All that is very well," in the words of Candide, "but let us cultivate our garden."

The Post Impressionist

Truth Crushed To Earth.

Post Office, Monday.

"FOR twenty-one years," he writes, "I have kept silence." And that, you must admit is a long silence—for a newspaperman.

"I ask," he adds, "permission to break it now." And break it he quite properly does—making journalistic (and other) history.

He is Hamilton Fyfe, among the best of the lot of us that were correspondents in the big war. And he is settling a controversy of censorship unsettled ever since the 30th of August, 1914—ever since the London Times published a story of his which was the first thoroughly to awaken his at first shocked, then indignant, British fellow-citizens to the desperate situation of their armies across the water: Fyfe's account of the retreat from Mons.

In all that war—which is going some—there was only one censorship more stupid than the British, and that was the American. The Post-Impressionist can—probably, here or elsewhere, some day will—produce documents in evidence of the superior stupidity of the American censorship. But such rivalry is not just now at issue. Just now to the fore is this muddled matter of Mons.

The British Expeditionary Force, first installment, had crossed the Channel, and behind it the British government rang down an asbestos curtain. The British government, of course, received complete information of what was happening over there, but it so thoroughly underestimated its own people that it thought they would make trouble by collapsing—if they immediately learned the truth.

What they would do when they eventually did learn the truth and how it had been withheld (as they obviously eventually must) the B. G. didn't speculate . . .

Well, anyhow, there was the Mons retreat. And Sir F. E. Smith, later the first Lord Birkenhead—a clever criminal lawyer—was in charge of the censorship, the so-called Press Bureau. And Fyfe wrote the facts for the Times. And somehow some of them got into the paper.

From that day to this, the dispute (as we've intimated) has raged. Admitted that so much of the dispatch as reached the public didn't produce the Government-dreaded panic—what an awful violation of confidence for Fyfe, an accredited correspondent, to evade the supervision of the Press Bureau!

So now here comes the present Earl of Birkenhead with a book about his predecessor — "Birkenhead, the Last Phase"— and therein writes:

"On Sunday, August 30 (1914) the Times published a special edition containing a long and gloomy account of the bedraggled state of the British Expeditionary Force... The Press Bureau, while excising names of regiments and places, had mistakenly permitted the publication of this story, but restored public confidence by issuing later on the same day a full statement of the position, which showed clearly that French's two corps had 'extricated themselves in good order, though with serious losses, and, having been reinforced, were ready to fight again. . . . On the whole, the (Press) Bureau gained in prestige from Sunday's agitations."

This dispels any lingering insinuation of Fyfe's having "evaded the censorship"—yet just where does it leave him?

It is, as he says, "A justification of the late Lord Birkenhead's action . . . and a condemnation of the dispatch for being 'gloomy' and untrue. That's just too much for Fyfe.

"It should be known, I think," he writes to his old paper, "that the dispatch was censored by Lord Birkenhead himself. It was taken to him after dinner on the Saturday evening, and he said as soon as he read it, 'This ought to be published.'

"He . . . made a number of cuts, and filled up the spaces with dots. This had the effect of making the account of the battle read much more 'gloomily.' . . . Seeing so many passages deleted, the readers of it . . . supposed that these had described incidents . . . too alarming to be printed. And, when they were told that they had been unnecessarily alarmed, they blamed . . . the writer.

"Yet no word was spoken either by Lord Birkenhead or by Mr. Asquith to let the public know how the dispatch had been dealt with. . . . They allowed the blame to rest on a correspondent who, being . . . as near the front as he could get (he was so near that, a few days after this, he was captured by a German cavalry patrol) had no opportunity to put himself right."

* * *

Well, that's the way with most war-time censorships and war-time politicians-in-office. But, in the long run, "Truth, crushed to earth——"

Carlisle Bargeron

A National Tammany.

In an ambitious undertaking similar to the Hitler youth movement, President Roosevelt is expected to announce in a few days the allotment of $50,000,000 to provide the youth of the country with spending money. The plan has been advocated by social workers for some time, and last week John A. Lang, president of the National Student Federation, made a radio appeal for popular support.

This movement, from what one can find out about it, is not intended to embrace youngsters on relief rolls or those coming within the scope of the CCC. It is, instead, designed to take in youngsters between the ages of 16 and 25, who are just out of high school or college and who are living at home. About 400,000 could be accommodated, it is estimated, and they would receive an average of about $12 a month. As explained by Dr. Lang in his radio talk they would be given jobs, "such as apprenticeships to public, business and professional leaders, assistantships in public schools, libraries, hospitals, museums, charitable and correctional institutions, the making of surveys of needs and facilities in the field of youth, youth placement on farms, the maintenance and operation of youth hostels, etc."

* * * *

The plight of the youngsters just out of high school or college and unable to get employment is a tragic thing, according to Dr. Lang. It behooves the Government to see that they are steered in the right channels and not permitted to become discouraged so early in life By keeping them supplied with ice cream and soda money it is believed their outlook will be much healthier. Anyway they comprise an outstanding class of society that is not getting anything from the Government these days, and naturally in any well-rounded-out program of redistributing the wealth every segment of society should come in.

Dr. Lang also points out that we would be dealing with our youth problem much better than Germany or Russia or the other European nations because they train their youngsters to be soldiers. In the work planned for our boys—the project apparently will be sort of a high-toned CWA—there will be no suggestion of militarism. And maybe, according to Dr. Lang, we will show the belligerent nations that ours is a better way of handling the boys.

A premature announcement about the project caused considerable enthusiasm at the meeting of the National Conference of Social Work at Montreal last week. Dr. Mary H. S. Hayes, director of vocational service for juniors of New York, eagerly told of $96,000,000 having been allotted. She exaggerated to the extent of $46,000,000 and the impression is that the Administration wishes she had not mentioned the matter at the time. It seems reluctant, in fact, to make the announcement.

* * * *

The bureau of education through local education boards would administer the project, according to the plan. The bureau would work closely with a Federal council of youth affairs.

Politicians of the Administration, that is to say, those who look upon things in the practical political light as distinguished from those who simply have the public weal at heart—it is often amazing how they arrive at the same ends at the same time—these politicians look upon the plan as a ten strike. Many students have thought that Hitler got his greatest hold on Germany through his youth movement. His strategy of giving the people all sorts of uniforms has been considered quite effective, but his organizing of the youngsters is looked upon as his master stroke.

The youngsters, according to psychologists, are the quickest way to the parents. Their enthusiasm is quickly absorbed by the mother and then by the father. As one cynic observed, one enthusiastic youngster in a family of six, drawing $12 a month from Mr. Roosevelt, ought to be able to make New Dealers of the whole family.

Already the Administration has a most effective organization in the rapidly growing Young Democrats headed by Jimmie Roosevelt. Giving of $12 a month to 400,000 or so youngsters between the ages of 16 and 25 should add immeasurably to the New Deal's popularity.

Definite Leaning Toward Individualism Not Surprising In Light Of Traditions Behind 6,500 Delegates Coming From Ever-Rugged Plains Of Middle Western States.

By David Hinshaw.

The following is written for The Post by a native of Kansas and a resident of Pennsylvania. In his own words, he has "worked in the vineyard of Republican Party politics ever since his return to the fold after Bull Mooseing with T. R." He is a student of public affairs, a lecturer and a well-known writer on political and governmental subjects.

THE Republican Party of the Middle West tends to be conservative, individualistic, and realistic in this year of grace, if the speeches and statement of principles of the grass roots conference are accurate indicators. Since those attending the conference came from the cities and towns and farms of 10 Middle Western States, they repesented a fair cross-section of all shades of political philosophy. The unity with which they adopted their declaration of principles should be heartening to Republicans everywhere.

Those who went to Springfield hoping to see a Donnybrook Fair came away disappointed. Those who fearfully watched it from afar were relieved. It was an earnest, orderly, Republican gathering where clear thinking prevailed. Those who wanted to see a revival meeting also were disappointed. Fervor there was and deadly earnestness, but no spiritual baptism. If they were praying folks they were the kind that presented their case to the Lord and then dusted off their knees preparatory to working their own way out of their difficulties.

Those who attended the conference or who followed its deliberations in the expectation of seeing a great liberal platform written and adopted that would promise to create a new heaven and a new earth were not satisfied. The 6,500 delegates, from the States which have served as the progressive leavening in the Republican loaf for a half century, gave evidence that they are not now seeking a new heaven and a new earth.

They seemed tired of making forced marches toward the mirage of a perfect social order which seeks realization over-night. They gave indication, too, of believing that the wisdom of the past should not be trampled under while experimenting in the present.

* * * *

THE conservative nature of the conference, which cannot be disposed of with an ugly curl of the lip by charging that it was dominated by the Wall Street influence, came from the concern of men and women who seek to retain whatever property continues to be theirs. They know that reckless expenditure is the father of grievous want. As conservatives they seek to conserve what they have left.

A leaning toward the creed of individualism was to be expected from them—they are the sons and daughters or grandsons and granddaughters, for the most part, of the world's greatest, grandest race of individualists. Heroic deeds live in their memories, the pride of these deeds pulses through their veins. So it was natural enough that these offspring of sturdy American stock would not deny the faith and the works of their fathers.

Somewhat by the same token we find their realism a natural outcome of the time and place. Idealism belongs to them by heritage and realism is theirs through struggle for existence. To some they appeared to turn back in the forward social march. One realistic idealist interpreted that by stating "If in trying to cross a swamp you find that you are sinking deeper and deeper at each step, you certainly will retrace your steps to solid ground before the water gets up to your chin—that is, you will if you have good sense." This the Republicans at Springfield did.

It was proper and wise for them not to write a platform. It was proper because this was a conference, not a convention, a sectional gathering, not a national one. It was wise because no one is competent today to define in detail all of the issues for next year; nor would any capable political strategist raise and fly his Ebenezer where it could be riddled by the enemy for a whole year.

* * * *

TOO many the conference served its original purpose admirably—that original purpose as conceived by Richard Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, was to clarify the thinking and stimulate the purpose of the Republican Party in the Middle West.

Mr. Jones conceived the idea at the annual Republican gathering in Kansas, the Kansas Day Club dinner, held in Topeka, January 29, last. He was convinced that such gatherings, where issues are presented by leaders, where party members get together, iron out differences and stimulate and strengthen each other, were well worth while. Republicans from other States in attendance liked the idea, and the Springfield conference grew out of this suggestion.

It was nearly wrecked at one stage when Gov. Landon of Kansas, at a luncheon in Washington, unwittingly gave the public its first complete knowledge of the plan. He talked freely because he was under the impression that his remarks were off the record. Due to a slip-up in the arrangements, some of the correspondents present were not so informed.

Gov. Landon, who was privy to the details but was not one of the stagers of the show, told of plans to hold the conference in Kansas City in May and of the desire of some to enlist William Allen White to head the resolution committee.

* * * *

THE Governor's misstep caused hurried conferences—the date of the conference was changed—another place for holding it was selected — potential Presidential and other candidates were barred. In the shuffle wherein the purpose of the conference was somewhat changed and also because of rules Mr. White himself laid down, he neither attended the conference nor served it as resolutions committee chairman.

There are some who feel that his sensitive understanding and his genius of expression could have translated the fervor and zeal of the delegates into baptismal fire. This is speculative. Whatever the conference lacked in baptismal fire it made up in materialistic approach to the problems raised by experimental theorists in Government.

An interesting phase of the convention was that Herbert Hoover's philosophy dominated it, but his name was not once mentioned in the formal deliberations; nor was the name of any other known, potential presidential candidate. The conference's one undeviating principle was that the presidential lists must be kept completely open for every living qualified man.

* * * *

THE grass roots conference has come and gone, and Mr. Hoover, continues as William Allen White described him two months ago, "to remain impossible or to become inevitable" as next year's Republican Party candidate. No one today can guess who the Republican candidate will be next year.

Regardless of who is named to carry the Republican banner in 1936, the platform will be the principles of Government enunciated by Herbert Hoover in the 1932 campaign if the Springfield conference is a real signboard. It is possible, of course, that the Republicans in 1936 will repeat their 1916 performance when Theodore Roosevelt created the issues and Charles Evans Hughes was the candidate.

Bunker Hill

By

William Lyon Phelps

OF course, the Americans were finally defeated at Bunker Hill; the British soldiers took possession of the redoubt and the Colonials were forced to leave it. Why, then, do Americans celebrate the occasion, and why was the Bunker Hill Monument erected?

Because this battle proved that the American farmers could stand up and hold their own against the professional soldiers of the world, against the British regulars from overseas; that is, so long as their ammunition held out. Indeed, there is enough glory for both sides in that struggle.

The untrained farmers were not terrified by the spectacle of trained soldiers advancing upon them; and the British regulars went up that terrible slope three times before they took it. Perhaps no other professional soldiers in the world would have done that. Here behind the fortifications were farmers, many of whom were accustomed to shoot squirrels with a rifle; and the British soldiers, in brilliant red uniforms and in close order, marched up against those deadly bullets. Twice they fell back, but they went up the third time.

Looking back through history we often see that a defeat brings more glory than any victory. One of the chief glories of England's naval history is the fight made by the Devonshire ship Revenge against 53 Spanish ships, in the year 1572. Now, the Revenge did not win that battle. On the contrary, the Revenge was sunk. But the odds were so great and the courage shown by the men on the single ship was so marvelous that the moral effect was tremendous, and its influence will last forever.

* * * *

In the annals of war, there have never been any generals greater than Hannibal and Napoleon. They were both finally defeated and their power permanently destroyed.

It would seem, therefore, that not the realization of ambition, not any victory, but certain qualities, which really lose nothing even by defeat, are the determining factors in the appraisal of men.

Corps d'Elite.

WISELY, patiently, most forcibly, Leonard D. White argues in the brief pages of "Government Career Service" (U. of Chicago Press, $1.50)—the case for the creation in America of a corps d'elite of governmental administrators, of a service which will draw the better men in the country for a career in the country's most important work. As a member of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Mr. White speaks of needs and possibilities with peculiar authority. As professor of public administration in the University of Chicago, he brings to the question a wide knowledge of the theory and practice of civil service the world over. And what he has to say is of ringing importance and interest, especially in Washington.

We can start off with a base-line from the English sociologist, Graham Wallas. "Governments," he wrote just before his death, "have come to be engaged not merely in preventing wrong things from being done, but in bringing it about that right things shall be done. A negative government requires only courage and consistency in its officials; but a positive government requires a constant supply of invention and suggestion."

That, it seems to me, is bed-rock truth. Then comes the question—whence? Well, out of the 700,000 civilian positions in the Federal service, or rather, out of the 460,000 positions at present under the merit system, Mr. White would wish to have set aside by schedule and fiat some 2,500—a mere sliver, you see, but so placed that those 2,500 would be the key positions of departmental administration. And they would form a distinct and permanent corps of men trained for the Government who expected to devote their lives to it.

* * * *

THE need seems obvious. Plain enough is the value to Great Britain of her splendid civil service. Other countries have followed suit. Alone among the large nations, America has scarcely realized the patent fact that "unless we establish a recognized career comparable to the careers which can be found in the universities, in the professions, and in the business world, the best men will go elsewhere and government will get exactly what it deserves."

After all, government in action is not a vague and misty concept—it is an organization of human beings for human ends. Competent men do not exactly spring into full-fledged existence overnight. This country has advanced somewhat beyond the rural and uncomplicated time when Jackson could express his naive thought that the duties of public office are so plain and simple that any man of moderate intelligence could perform them. That doctrine becomes quite laughable if you should say that any fairly intelligent man could perform the functions of a doctor or a lawyer, of an agrobiologist or a chemical engineer. And government administration in the machine age is no less a demanding and complex profession than any of these.

Few people can help thinking that our present practice is very much as if any army of trained and seasoned soldiers should be administered by colonels and generals summoned from Main street over the week-end. Too often the alternative, when we are really pressed for competent men, has been to pluck them out of the business world at a dollar a year, or to rally them hastily from the universities. You don't see the American Tel. & Tel. run by such makeshift devices.

* * * *

NO, this country has grown up, and its government should be treated in a grown-up manner. Inertia holds us back. Objections to such a career service will be made mostly on the basis of such old and roundly unintelligent shibboleths as "patronage is the price of democracy" and "the less government, the better." But we must go on to a governmental corps d'elite, not in any Old-World sense of class and privilege, but in the thoroughly democratic sense that every man shall have this chance to become competent and the most competent shall serve.

For that kind of public service is our truest American tradition. It is a great pleasure to remind the gentry who are always shrieking "un-American" whenever a proposal like this comes up, that "the original American tradition was entirely in favor of a permanent, established and respected public service in which careers were not only possible but were almost inevitable." From 1789 to 1829 we were steadily nurturing an administrative service "of permanence, integrity and competence."

And then came Andrew Jackson and the spoils system, and our entirely false tradition of government by amateurs which Leonard White assails with such sinew and point in this book.

Audrey Frye Married.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 16.—Miss Audrey Dell Frye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Duke and the late Ira E. Frye, and Mr. Wilbur Costello, of Middleburg, Va., were married yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, this city, by the Rev. J. W. Brill. The bride wore white with a corsage of sweet peas and roses. Members of the families witnessed the ceremony.

Illegal Papers Dare Austria's Rule by Censor

Editors, Printers, Carriers All Defy Risk of Prison.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, June 16.—The child of censorship is the illegal, secretly published and circulated newspaper, and in Austria there are many such children.

The most widely circulated of the mimeographed papers is a pert Nazi publication which calls itself "Illkorr," which is short for illegal correspondence.

When the paper first appeared some time ago it announced that its purpose was "to keep you informed of all inner-political development in Austria, which, for obvious reasons, are silently ignored by the official news agency." The paper then went on to say:

"Thanks to its good connections in all the federal ministries, as well as with leaders of the various voluntary armed organizations, the police, the army and leading business circles, the Illkorr will at all times be in a position to provide you with authentic information on current topics."

Many suspect that the Illkorr, at times, will find it impossible to resist the temptation to publish simon-pure Nazi propaganda with little or no regard for the news merits. But for the reading public it is an exciting game to see the news first in the secretly circulated paper, and then later see it substantiated by developments.

Thrills are more evenly divided among the mechanical, editorial and circulation staffs than is the case with legal newspapers. The printers and mimeographers run the risk of imprisonment, while the circulation department sends its men into highly dangerous territory.

A carrier of illegal news sheets has been seen to scramble through a network of barbed wire entanglements, machine guns and police sentries to deliver a copy of his publication. Such carriers are chosen for their appearance of innocence or stupidity.

Silver Spring Country Fair On Tomorrow

Proceeds of Fete Will Go to Carry Out Elaborate Health Program.

Plans have been completed by the Woodside-Silver Spring public health lay committee for an old-time country fair, which will be held at the State Armory in Silver Spring, Md., tomorrow and Tuesday. Proceeds will be used to carry out an elaborate health program.

A children's costume parade, in which several hundred youngsters are expected to take part, will open the fete at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The procession will be led by a boys' band of 40 pieces and a Mickey Mouse wrist watch will be awarded the boy and girl with the most original costumes.

Fifteen local merchants have taken booths for exhibition purposes and a number of automobiles and trucks will be shown by local dealers. An unusual display of clothing, curios and manuscripts dating from 1802, owned by Mrs. Bertha Horr, will be a feature. The Silver Spring Public Library will have a special exhibit.

The usual carnival attractions will be supplemented by fashion shows, both tomorrow and Tuesday at 8:30 p. m., with dancing following. A dance exhibit will be given at 8 p. m. Tuesday. Pony rides for the children, a magician, a wonder tree, tap dancing, street singers, a flower exhibit and clowns also are scheduled.

Prizes will be given for exhibits of fancy work and of baked and canned goods. All entries must be made by 9 a. m. tomorrow. The exhibit of fancy work, which includes three classes—hooked rugs, quilts and needlework will be judged by The Washington Post. The exhibit of baked and canned goods has been divided into classes of pies, cakes, bread and rolls, and canned goods.

Mrs. Morrison M. Clark is general chairman of the affair, which will be held from 2 p. m. until midnight both days.

Declarations Are Presented at Tappahannock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., June 16.—Eighteen candidates for political offices in Essex County, subject to the Democratic primary election on August 6, filed their declarations in the courthouse. The names of the candidates who have no opposition will not appear on the ticket.

The candidates are as follows:

House of Delegates—Essex, King and Queen and Middlesex Counties, A. E. Segar, incumbent; J. Franklin Dew, Douglas Mitchell and J. B. Gray. Commissioner of revenue—George D. Ellis, incumbent; Burnley Newbill and C. A. Gresham. Treasurer—John L. Parker, incumbent. Commonwealth's attorney—James M. Lewis, incumbent, and Emory Carlton. Clerk of court—A. D. Latane, incumbent. Sheriff—S. S. Newbill and B. B. Spindle. Board of supervisors—J. N. DeShazo, George W. Ellis and C. C. Toombs. Constable—J. A. Wilkerson and J. W. Brisending. State senator from Essex, King and Queen, Mathews, York, Gloucester and Middlesex Counties—William A. Wright.

St. Margaret's Alumnae Elect.

Tappahannock, Va., June 16.—The new officers of St. Margaret's Alumnae Association were elected at the annual meeting which was held in the Woman's Club room here. These are Mrs. Leslie Trevette, president; Miss Mary Fairfax Cauthorn, vice president; Miss Fleda Ochener, recording secretary; Miss Elizabeth Dame, corresponding secretary, and Miss Catherine Pendleton, treasurer. Miss Edith Latane, headmistress of St. Margaret's School, spoke. A buffet supper was served.

Clara Phillips, Hammer Killer To Leave Prison

"I'll Try Not to Hate the World," Says Woman Placed on Parole.

By the Associated Press.

Tehachapi, Calif., June 16.—Clara Phillips, notorious "hammer" slayer of more than a decade ago, will walk through the gates of the California women's prison to freedom Monday over the protest of women's clubs throughout the State.

"I'll try not to hate the world," said Mrs. Phillips, who has spent 12 years of a 30-year term behind the bars and is being placed upon parole. "I hope there are those who will understand me.

"I want to see my mother."

The story of Clara Phillips is the story of the eternal triangle. Mrs. Phillips suspected her husband, Armour, of intimacy with Alberta Meadows, a girl friend. She lured Miss Meadows to a secluded road and beat her to death with a hammer.

Later, Mrs. Phillips escaped from the Los Angeles County jail, only to be recaptured months later in Honduras.

"I had the misfortune to be a spectacular case," she said recently. "Had I been an obscure little girl in whom no one was interested I should have been out a long time ago. But I was a good story . . . Perhaps not unattractive . . . an escape to romantic Latin America . . . thrills . . . melodrama."

Ten years ago Phillips, who, so records show, has never divorced Clara, said he would be waiting for his wife when she was released and that he would attempt to make amends.

Mrs. Phillips, however, indicated he had gone from her life.

"I never expect to have another husband," she said.

During confinement, her hair has turned from blond to a light brown with a trace of gray.

The convicted slayer has been studying dentistry. She said she wished to become a laboratory worker.

"Ther is a great deal more kindness in this world behind the bars than in the world outside," said the woman who declared she feels she was treated unjustly by the courts.

Prison officials have cooperated with Mrs. Phillips in her desire for privacy. She has written but few letters.

Hubbard Residence Burns.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., June 16.—The residence on the Oliver W. Hubbard farm near East New Market, burned yesterday morning. The Hurlock Fire Company was called, but the fire had gained such headway that it was beyond control. The house was a 10-room structure and considered one of the show places of the district.

A Radiant Business

THE milk business turns night to good account.

Producer and consumer have their say about it, and the public interest is protected with regulatory safeguards.

Where the dairyman's stake is represented by farmers' co-operatives, as in this territory, no corporate milkman could bilk the dairyman of his due—and no milkman worthy of his vitamins would want to.

All parties know what's what and why—or can readily find out.

The record of local sales is open to the producer—he knows at all times how much milk is being sold in bottles, how much over and above the bottle demand must be made into by-products to move the total supply off the farms.

He knows—or can find out—at any time the shifts in consumer demand which are affecting his income through the price differential between milk for the bottle trade and the excess which must be worked into butter, cheese, ice cream and the like.

The fluctuations of these two classifications determine the amount of his cash income from the distributor.

The producer knows how much milk he has supplied.

The health department knows in what forms the city is taking his milk—so much as fluid, the remainder in by-products.

The milkman pays accordingly.

There is no hocus pocus about the figures.

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

Hollywood, June 14.

"BECKY SHARP." The first full length picture to be produced in full color. A carefully prepared and studied flicker designed to revolutionize the motion picture industry.

It may change the color of pictures gradually, but it will not do it as anticipated . . . suddenly and completely. There is definitely a place for color in pictures, but it will have to be used wisely. Pictures will continue to cast their shadows.

Compare the big revolution in flickers with this latest threatened revolt.

The first all-talking picture was "Lights of New York" in 1928. It started to be a short, was a little too long, and was converted into a feature. It was written by Murray Roth and Hugh Herbert, now a star at Warners, and directed by Bryan Foy. He is now a supervisor at Warners. The picture cost about $50,000.

• • • •

"Becky Sharp" cost over a million dollars. It was made by talented and high-salaried people who were, and still are, concerned with the stage. It was directed by Rouben Momoulian and the color was designed by Robert Edmond Jones, who was also a pioneer in theatrical productions. The star of the flicker is also from the Broadway stage, Miriam Hopkins.

This screen version was adapted from Langdon Mitchell's play, "Becky Sharp," which cost about $20,000, by Francis Edward Faragoh, who was a member of the new playwrights' theater of Greenwich Village. Of course, it all came from Thackeray's novel, "Vanity Fair," which cost the picture company $1.

• • • • •

CONSIDER the opening of "Lights of New York." It was first shown at a midnight performance at the Strand Theater in New York. The audience was packed with stage actors and actresses and producers; probably many concerned with the making of "Becky Sharp" were in that audience.

The big question was: "Is the talking picture a novelty or is it here to stay?" Those of the legit drama were frightened; but there was a definite enthusiasm by that audience and a definite decision. The talking picture was no novelty and it would oust the silent flicker.

Now look at the preview of "Becky Sharp" in Hollywood. The greater portion of the audience was composed of the screen stars, the Claudette Colberts and Marlene Dietrichs who wanted to see how performers looked and acted in color, for they might have to be doing this to keep their ratings with the fans. The motion picture producers were also there; they wanted to see if they would have to color their product.

• • • •

There wasn't any definite enthusiasm or any definite decision about "Becky Sharp." The verdict was a mixed one.

It was a little different than looking at the average flicker, the audience wasn't judging a picture merely from an entertainment and artistic viewpoint. It was looking to see if "Becky Sharp" was going to change the pictures. "Becky Sharp" had an advance reputation.

There is a big difference between "Lights of New York" and "Becky Sharp." Sound is something audiences wanted and accepted eagerly. Color is not a necessity, it is merely a novelty.

• • • •

MAMOULIAN tried to make color as well as the performers act. In the sequence of the Duchess of Richmond's ball, Director Mamoulian made his color an exciting part of the story. This sequence begins with a fine pictorial effect and then with the roar of the cannons builds to a climax through a series of shots which progress from the sobriety of colors like gray blue and green to the exciting danger and threat of deep orange and flaming red. The effect is achieved by the selection of dresses and uniforms worn by the characters and the color of the backgrounds and the lights.

There has been much talk about the difficulty of working under the lights used on a set when filming Technicolor. Incandescent lights are used on the regular sets and arc lights are used when Technicolor is employed. Figures proved, and many actors in this flicker said, that it wasn't as hot under the arc lights.

With it she carried a bouquet of white butterfly orchids and lilies of the valley. Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, and Mrs. Malone, were the attendants.

Following an informal reception the young couple left for a wedding trip to Mexico and will make their home at Fort Winfield Scott. Lieut. Henry is the son of Mrs. David E. Henry and the late Mr. Henry, of Spokane, Wash.

Tally Ho Club, Socialite Group, Holds a Dance

Will Sponsor One Affair a Week to While Away Summer Tedium.

An interesting event of the early summer season was a dance arranged by the Tally Ho Club committee at the Army and Navy Country Club Thursday night.

The Tally Ho Club of Washington is a new club organized by a group of young socialites and debutantes headed by Mr. Jack Hayes, Mr. Warren Bouve, Mr. Cy Whitney, Mrs. Charles E. Stewart, jr., Miss Mary Bouve, Miss Betty Marsh and Miss Catherine Brown for the purpose of helping members of Washington society who remain in the capital to endure the tedious summer months. To accomplish this, the club will give one event each week, either sporting or social.

The high spot of the evening was the presentation of the bowling trophies to the winners of the Tally Ho annual bowling match last week. The winners of the bowling match were Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman, debutante daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Paul E. Dampman, and Mr. James M. Proctor, jr., son of Hon. and Mrs. James M. Proctor, Justice of the District Supreme Court.

Mr. Charles Stewart was toastmaster and among those who made speeches were Mr. Jack Hayes, Mr. Warren Bouve, Miss Mary Bouve, Mr. James Proctor, Miss Marjorie Dampman, Miss Diane Maitland and Mr. Tom Figueres.

Those present at the dinner were Miss Dorothy Letts, Miss Mary Bouve, Miss Lillian Willett and her guest, Mr. Colman Barrett; Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman and her guest, Mr. Vanburen DeFries; Miss Diane Maitland, Miss Jane Maitland, Miss Catherine Pearson, Miss Charlotte Brown, Miss Esther Wallace and her guest, Miss Margaret Latimer; Miss Catherine Brown, Miss Eleanor Pierce, Mr. Jack Hayes, Mr. Charles E. Stewart, jr., Mr. James M. Proctor, jr., Mr. Warren Bouve, Mr. Tom Figueres, Mr. John Brosnan, Mr. David Letts, Mr. Loring Cluster, Mr. Frank Cook, Mr. Ramsdale Cummings and Mr. Roland Lyon.

Mrs. Octavia Sykes Swenson has as her guests at the home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, on Cleveland avenue, Mrs. Charles Van Horn, of Columbus, Ohio, and Miss Leone Shotwell, of Jackson, Miss.

Miss Mal Sykes, another daughter of Judge and Mrs. Sykes, will have as her guest Miss Norvelle Beard, of Jackson, Miss., who is en route to her home after having attended the June week activities at Annapolis and visiting in New York.

Miss Cornelia Henning, of Memphis, Tenn., who made her debut in Memphis during the past winter, will arrive during the week from West Point, where she was the guest of Gen. and Mrs. W. D. Connors.

Cuban Association Is Feted at Lake

Mr. Ralph Z. Tobriner entertained yesterday at his cabin, Villa Siboney, Lake Jackson, Va., in honor of the Centro Social Cubano. The guests included: The Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, the Secretary of the Dominican Legation and Senors de Brache, Senora Rosa M. Amores, Senorita Estrella Amores, Senor Horacio M. Amores, Miss Isabel Allen, Senor Raul Diez de Medina, Senor Carlos Capo, Senor Francisco Hernandez, Senor Alfaro Sera and Senor Manuel Alvarez.

Smartly Gowned Guests Attend McCormick-Barnes Wedding

Matching the smartness of the fashionable wedding on Saturday of Miss Katrina McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Albert G. Sims and the late Senator Medill McCormick and Mr. Courtlandt D. Barnes, jr., were the costumes of many of the guests, who included officials and diplomats in Washington, as well as numbers of the socially prominent in other cities.

Among those who were photographed as they came from the church after the ceremony were Miss Alicia Rodgers, wearing a delectable frock in shades of violet with a hat of the same hue, and Miss Helen Wardman, who wore an afternoon frock printed in a bouquet of bright shades and with it wore a wide-brimmed hat. Mrs. William McMillan, of Baltimore, who is pictured with her husband above, was gowned in a smart red-and-white print with a Breton sailor of navy blue and low-heeled sandals of navy blue suede. A bright red velvet ribbon banded the hat.

820th Birthday Of Magna Carta Observed Here

Senator King Gives Address at Meeting of Group in Lafayette Hotel.

The scene of the field of Runnymede as it appeared 820 years ago, when the monarch, John of England, was forced to sign the great charter, first guaranty of law and freedom of the English speaking races, was recalled Saturday evening when "Magna Carta Day" was celebrated at the Hotel La Fayette.

The meeting was called by Mrs. M. de Clare Berry in a double capacity as head of the District of Columbia branch of the Magna Carta Day Association, and as a member of the Society of Dames of the Magna Charta.

The Magna Carta Day Association has for its purpose a celebration one day each year in all the seven nations around the world that for their national language have the English tongue. This association was founded some years ago by Mr. J. W. Hamilton, of St. Paul, Minn.

The principal speaker of the evening was Senator William H. King.

Among others present were Mrs. John H. Overton, Col. O. W. McNeese, Mrs. Curtis Perry, whose husband is a descendant of Nelly Custis; Mrs. William H. King, wife of the Senator; Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, wife of the Representative from New Orleans; Mrs. Richard L. de Saussure, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Judge C. C. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tirrell, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fitzhugh Tallman, Mr. Daniel Smith Gordon, who was present as officer of the Scions of Colonial Cavaliers; Mrs. Wade Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kerr Chisholm.

First Lady Sees Chas. Larrabee Wed Miss Tully

Miss Paula Tully, daughter of Mrs. Alice Lee Tully, of Washington, was married Saturday morning at the St. Regis, in New York, to Mr. Charles Rollin Larrabee, of Washington.

The Rev. James F. Tully performed the ceremony in the library suite before an altar of palms and similax flanked with tall vases of lilies. A reception for the immediate families and a few friends followed. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came from Washington to witness the ceremony.

The bride's mother gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of white satin made with a long train and knee-length tunic of lace. Her short tulle veil fell from a band of black velvet and pearls and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and chincherinchi.

Miss Grace Tully, her sister's only attendant, was dressed in blue point d'esprit made with three-deep ruffles forming the skirt and short-puffed sleeves. She wore a large leghorn hat and carried cornflowers and yellow daisies. Mr. Leonard Larrabee was his brother's best man.

The couple sailed the same afternoon on the Queen of Bermuda and on their return they will live in Washington.

Skin Worries Are Banished By Cream Mask

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHAT A BRUTALLY frank friend your mirror is! After you've pounded the pavement from shop to shop, and sweltered 'neath a torrid sun it does seem as though it could spare a bit of flattery. But no! You stand in front of it to remove your hat, and what do you see? A dull drawn countenance literally scrawled across with fatigue lines.

Surely, you say, a cool shower, and a bit of rest will erase these heart-rending damages. Later, you peer again into your mirror only to have your hopes dispelled. How can I last the evening through, you wonder, with this face as my misfortune?

Your worries are but matters of the moment if you happen to have a jar of white creamy mask on your dressing table. Like a magical snow from the polar regions, this cools and refreshes your skin, and gives your face a welcome lift.

In the words of one woman whose faultlessly clear and smooth complexion attests the care she gives it, this cream mask does not just rejuvenate the skin—it regenerates it!

Briefly, here's what it really does. Immediately after you spread it across your face it imparts a delightful coolness. Soon you'll feel your face tingle as circulation peps up. As the mask dries, it actually rests your skin and firms the contour. When you remove it, you will see for yourself how it has cleansed those sluggish and impacted pores. Consistent use of it refines the skin, giving it a silky texture past your fondest dreams.

The mask serves two purposes. It is a pick-up treatment late in the afternoon when your skin is dull and drawn. Then it imparts a glow and a youthfulness that will make you feel real Cinderella-ish.

Or—it is a regular part of your systematic skin care. Use it at first every day for several weeks, and then at intervals two or three days apart. If you do this, you can depend on it to counteract the brutal frankness of your mirror.

Cosmetic Discovery.

Let your lips speak for you, not alone with words, but with color. Let them tell of glamor and romance. Depend on them to bring out your beauty, and to stamp you as a woman of individuality.

How to do this? Certainly not by contenting yourself with any lipstick. You must remember that the shade of some is perfect beneath a bright sun, but fades in the glare of electric lights. There are some that are too purplish, others with too much of an orange cast—but there are lipsticks which are perfectly adapted to any time, and any type.

Such a one we found half hidden in a large display case in a downtown store. Hidden, we say, because it was placed to one side and overshadowed by the perfumes, powders, and cosmetics put out by nationally known companies.

Discovering the lipstick in this fashion, curiosity prompted us to try it. Now we nominate it for a place in the first rank of cosmetic discoveries.

While it comes in several shades the cherry red is by far the most preferred. It's a deep, real cherry red, that lights up when you rub it on. You'll find that it spreads smoothly and gives almost a glow to your lips.

Don't Bleach Skin Now.

Query. Please send me the name of a good bleach. My face is covered with freckles and I want to remove them. D. E. L.

Answer. This is a very bad time for bleaching your skin. As soon as the old skin cuticle peels off a new and sensitive skin is exposed. This will freckle and burn very quickly. Why not wait until fall to bleach and now try a good foundation cream or lotion which will help conceal your freckles and protect your skin at the same time?

Also use a darker shade of powder. Powder and foundation will serve to hide those freckles almost entirely.

Hilltop Poplars.

THESE POPLARS on the hill's thin ridge
Against the empty vista of the sky:
These poplars are a picket fence
Along which, when night darkens down
In somber peace mischievous winds
Rattle elastic staves, each wind a boy
Suddenly lonely on a midnight road,
Making some brittle sounds for company.

Variant.

A WORD MAY seem indifferently harsh,
Yet prove the crystal medium I need
To paint a muskrat-haunted, sullen marsh,
Where autocratic waters write their screed.
No singing grace notes will inspire the lip
Intent to sound re-echoed vocalings
Of throaty frogs; the rhythmic slush and drip
A neaptide at its turning, slowly swings.

With life itself our words must quickly shade
From Ophir gold to rush-like bronze and green,
That song may pierce a sun's bright ambuscade,
Or sonnetize where wild marsh grasses lean,
Narcissus-wise, above a pool whose play
On varied tones, word colorings portray.

TRUDGING ALONG these birch-aisled woods
Vocal with brooding silence,
I am offered again
The wistfulness of youth,
The lilting rhythm of its song
Unhurried by desire;
But with what gentleness
All this
Wraps me round!
Here, in the dappled solitude
I feel the tenderness
Of beauty that defied long search
Until the heart
Forgot to grieve!

THE STREAMS that seek and never find the sea,
But in the scorched red desert sink and drown,
The streams that lag where daisy hummocks frown,
Far from the meadows' cool green tapestry,
The streams that never image flower or bee,
Nor flash of bird nor windows of a town,
But where a crazed sun glares immensely down,
Faint at the waste-land's hot malignity—

How like some barren-foaming lives they are,
Which, barren of the same snowy peaks as all,
Get lost on dead plateaus of salt and stone;
While brothers, flung through hill-defiles afar,
Pour down triumphant, rushing to the call
Of the lord ocean's welcoming thunder-tone!

Escape.

I KNOW of a land that is deep in my breast:
It's my secret estate; it's my island of rest;
It's my realm of the madman, the poet, the fool;
It's the Home of the Blest; it is Ultima Thule.

From the tension of toil and depression of debt
In a magical moment I'm off to forget,
And to build me a house without labor or tool
In the mystical region of Ultima Thule.

From the smothering heat of the factory steam
I am off to elude the discomfort, and dream
Of the winds from the glittering glaciers that cool
The salubrious valleys of Ultima Thule.

From the timorous souls and the manacled hands
I'm off to the bravest and frankest of lands,
Which has never known politics, pulpit or school,
In the limitless freedom of Ultima Thule.

When I'm sick of the drab and inert and inane
And am willing to be just a little insane,
Then I sail without sextant or compass or rule
In the turbulent waters of Ultima Thule.

When I tire of the dumb and the musicless crowd
And the voice of me wants to be shouting aloud,
Then I sing the great songs of a jubilant Yule
In my spirit's Lost Province of Ultimate Thule.

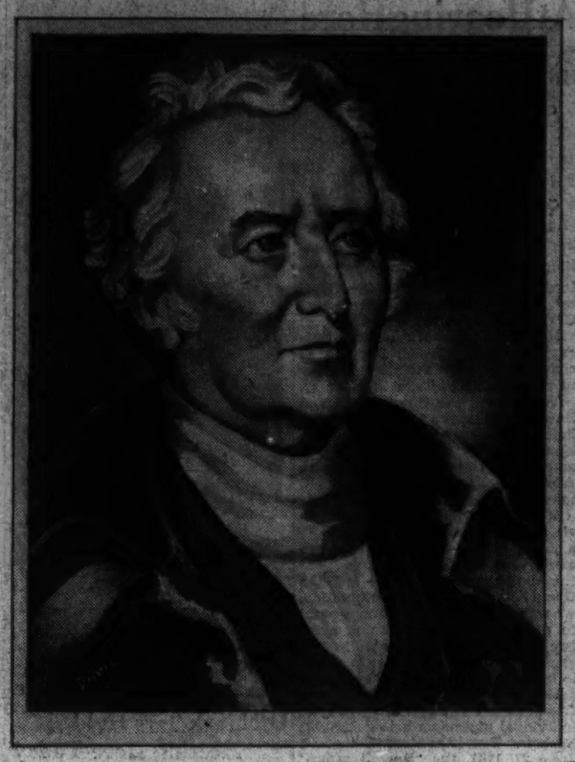
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Trumbull—Sarah the Unknown.



While studying art in London, John Trumbull, famous painter of Revolutionary War scenes, met and married an English beauty whose last name remains a mystery to this day. He painted her as she was dying and the veiled portrait hung over his bed until his death. The above sketch is from the painting.

Famed Painter Married English Beauty of Unknown Name.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

"I HAD THE MISFORTUNE to lose my wife, who had been the faithful and beloved companion of all the vicisssitudes of 24 years. She was the perfect personification of truth and sincerity—wise to counsel, kind to console—by far the most important and better moral half of me, and, withal, beautiful beyond the usual beauty of women!"

Thus wrote one of America's master painters, John Trumbull, of Sarah, his wife, whose surname to this day remains a mystery, but whose beauty, according to all who knew, was all that was claimed for her by her devoted husband in his eulogy after her death.

There is no more appealing romance in American history than that of John Trumbull and his English wife. The romantic touch of an abiding mystery in her parentage enhanced this appeal.

In the Capitol building here millions yearly pause before the paintings of John Trumbull of historic American scenes without realizing the story behind the career of the artist. Perhaps only a few know anything of his background which was intrinsically American for he was the youngest child of that stanch Revolutionary patriot, John Trumbull, war Governor of Connecticut, friend and counselor of George Washington who nicknamed him "Brother Jonathan," a title which afterward became applied often to the United States itself.

The pictures by Trumbull in the Capitol include: "The Surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga," "The Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown," "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence" and "The Resignation of Washington as Commander in Chief of the Army."

As a portrait painter Trumbull also excelled and one of his portraits, many of which had no market in his own day and generation, would be a fortunate find today.

Born in Lebanon, Conn., in 1756, Trumbull entered Harvard in 1772. He was the youngest member of the graduating class in 1773. His erudition won him the post of school master in his native town.

After the guns whose shots were heard around the world were fired at Lexington, Trumbull, fired with patriotic zeal and youthful enthusiasm, joined the first Connecticut regiment.

Appointed By Washington.

From childhood Trumbull had displayed a decided talent for drawing. When this became known in the army this gift was utilized officially in drawing maps of the British positions. When George Washington heard of the young recruit who could draw so well and who was the son of his friend and co-patriot he asked to see him and enchanted with the young man's charm and genius at once appointed him his second aide-de-camp.

While in Boston, Trumbull mingled painting and drawing lessons with his military duties. In 1780 he made up his mind to go to London and study with Benjamin West, the great artist. As he afterward wrote, he was intent on this plan because he wanted to commemorate in art the great events of his country's revolution. Arriving in London he was well received there, instructed by West and all went well until news came of Benedict Arnold's treason and arrest and execution of Maj. Andre. As a matter of reprisal Trumbull was arrested and held prisoner for seven months, then finally released on his promise to leave England, West and Copley being his sureties.

Trumbull spent some time in Holland and France and reached America again in 1782. Gov. Trumbull was anxious that his son now leave art as a profession and study law. John Trumbull tells us, though, that "he pined for the arts, and dwelt upon the honors paid to artists in the glorious days of Greece and Athens." After peace was declared he returned to London, resumed his study with West and began the first of the series of Revolutionary paintings. In 1789 Trumbull returned to America and for the next five years was busy painting Washington, the "Signers" and the American generals.

Affection Returned.

The first hint of his romance with the fair unknown "Sarah" was in 1800 when Trumbull in London was seen frequently in company with a lovely young woman, always with a duenna in attendance, gracious and evidently of high lineage.

His devotion was most marked and she returned his affection. One day in 1800 Trumbull summoned a few of his close friends to a small London church to witness his marriage. Sarah was escorted only by the duenna and nobody seemed to knew anything of her family or early history. Then duenna disappeared after the wedding and history has been satisfied with the title of "Madame Trumbull" for the attractive wife of the painter.

In 1804 after a happy four years the Trumbulls returned to America, where the young wife met her husband's relatives for the first time. Her charm was apparent to all and during the four years they lived in New York Trumbull was busy with his portrait painting.

In 1808 they returned to London and remained until 1815, unfortunately caught in the mesh of the War of 1812. Despite his reputation as an artist some thought him to be a diplomatic agent of the new Republic. It was in 1817 that Congress passed the bill authorizing his Capitol paintings, paying him $8,000 for each of them.

For seven years Trumbull worked on the paintings, his heart saddened by the growing ill health of Mrs. Trumbull. As he sat beside her the thought came to him to paint her. He did so and this remains the only portrait extant of her. It can be seen that her coloring is very delicate, her hair light brown and eyes of either gray or dark blue. Veiled with a green silk curtain to keep away the gaze of merely curious eyes, the portrait until his death hung above his bed.

Trumbull was nearing 70 years of age when his wife died. He began a new series of Revolutionary paintings which finally were given to Yale College in exchange for an annuity of $1,000. He lived until 83 constantly adding to the Yale collection.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

IF June 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

Carelessness in eating or diet is apt to have an unfavorable digestive reaction on this day. So select your food with care. One can overindulge in food as well as drink. The wise man or woman will exercise moderation in both, if they do not wish to pay the penalty an abused stomach always exacts. Conservative business methods are advocated, as they probably will produce the best results. This day may not be very favorable for unplanned social activities, as household or business duties are likely to interfere. It will be good judgment to exercise care in the spending of money.

If a woman, and June 17 is your birthday, you probably get more pleasure dwelling in memories of the past than you do living in the present, or planning for the future. Any form of research work, especially of a historical character, should fascinate you. Books of a romantic, historical type are most likely your favorites, and probably influence your thinking, and some of your actions. Unsuspected by friends or relatives, you may do a lot of fantastic day dreaming, which affords you an unlimited amount of entertainment. As a librarian, teacher, writer, lecturer, antique dealer, or seller of things of an artistic nature, you should be not only happy, but successful. Married life will probably have a great deal to offer you.

If a man, and June 17 is your natal day, you will have to be progressive and up-to-date to see your dreams of success realized. Painting, sculptoring, architecture, literature, chemistry, as well as engineering, and work of an educational nature, are among the activities in which you should do exceptionally well.

Man Who Overcame Drink Habit 25 Years Ago Encourages "Housewife."

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The pitiful appeal for advice made to you last Thursday by the periodic drinker's wife who signed herself "Housewife" recalls my own experience of 25 years ago, when this writer had allowed himself to descend to depths even lower (if such a thing is possible) than those reached by her husband.

First of all, I used my will power to make an attempt to quit. My wife had tried persuasion and threats to leave me; she had slipped powders into my coffee, all of which only tended to increase my stubbornness. We went to church regularly and prayed to God and the Virgin for help. I could not get a job. My wife went to work at $7 a week, and I stole her money, pawned her ring, watch and anything I could slip out of the house, in order to buy whisky.

* * * *

One day I saw an advertisement in The Post of a cure. I made up my mind to give it a trial. I had no money. But the president of the company sold me a $3 bottle on trial, and to his generosity and kind advice I can credit my relief from the horrible drink habit. I stuck it out for a week; the cure nauseated me, but from that day in April, 1910, to this day in June, 1935, I have had no desire for drink. In fact, the very smell of the stuff makes me sick. Others can rid themselves of this disease as I did, but only through the exercise of enough will power to make the attempt.

* * * *

Now I am a respected citizen of the community, have held my present job for 16 years, my $10,000 home is free of debt and we have two bank accounts totaling between $3,000 and $4,000. I still have the same wife of 38 years' standing. In fact, it's a right good old world, in spite of the NRA. (If required, name and address will be furnished, but not for publication). J. M. C.

Self-Help Necessary.

DEAR J. M. C.: Your experience corroborates my own belief—derived from observation—that the patient's will to be cured is the most powerful factor in throwing off the shackles of habitual alcoholic intemperance. This will-to-be-free is roused by different devices in different individuals, I suppose, but in the last analysis it must be supported by a strong inner compulsion rather than any outward persuasion, if the cure is to be lasting.

* * * *

I feel sure "Housewife" will be grateful for your testimonial and will appreciate the spirit of helpfulness in which it was written. I, too, am glad to have someone come forward to support my statement, made to her, that "dipsomania . . . sometimes yields to . . . treatment." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Blueberry Muffins and Chicken Suggested for Menu.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE DUTH OVEN is a real life saver when the thermometer reaches the sizzling point. An oven dish, especially blueberry muffins, is a real treat even on the hottest day, but it is more than likely it will be discarded as an impractical idea if it means lighting the oven. The Dutch oven is a small portable affair made of metal. It is heated by a single burner atop the stove and can be used successfully for all those smaller dishes that are cooked in the regular oven, weather permitting.

If you have a Dutch oven it is a simple matter to have rolls heated in a jiffy in the morning, baked custard, au gratin dishes, and even pies and biscuits without making the kitchen a regular inferno by lighting up the large oven. The temperature of the Dutch oven is controlled by the flame of one burner and it may be regulated exactly like a large oven by turning the flame to low, medium or high. Today's dinner menu suggests two dishes that may be baked in the Dutch oven—chicken and noodles au gratin and blueberry muffins.

Bake the Chicken First.

The chicken and noodles should be baked first and kept warm on the back of the stove while the muffins are being baked, or if the muffins are to be served with the salad course, they may be baked after the family has come to the table.

The preparation for the chicken and noodle dish is done mostly on top of the stove. Cook the noodles in plenty of boiling salted water and when tender drain them. Place the noodles in the bottom of a buttered casserole. Make a medium white sauce using the following proportions: 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 cup cold milk, ¼ teaspon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Cook in the top of a double boiler until smooth and thick and add 1 tablespoon chopped red pimento for every cup of milk used. Heat chopped cooked chicken in white sauce and when heated pour over noodles in casserole. Top with grated American cheese and sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in Dutch oven (moderately hot) until crumbs are brown and the cheese is melted. Serve from the casserole.

The frozen tomato juice cocktail is merely your favorite tomato cocktail or tomato juice seasoned to suit your individual taste and frozen to a mush in the trays of a mechanical refrigerator. The mixture will freeze easily in one-half hour. Serve in regular cocktail glasses.

Blueberry Muffins.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons melted shortening
½ cup frsh blueberries or huckleberries

Sift flour before measuring. Save out ¼ cup. Mix and sift remaining flour with salt, baking powder and sugar. Add the milk gradually, the well-beaten egg and the melted fat. Roll the berries in the remaining flour. This will keep them from falling to the bottom of the muffins. Fold berries into mixture. Pour into well-greased muffin-tins, filling the tins two-thirds full. Bake in a hot oven (400 to 425 degrees Farenheit) from 20 to 25 minutes.

Waldorf salad (chopped celery and apples) mixed with two-thirds the quantity of cubed fresh or canned pineapples and mixed with enough mayonnaise to hold together makes an interesting salad. Serve it in crisp lettuce cups topped with pecan-nut meats.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Neglected 'Running Ears' Held Cause of Frequent Deafness

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY of us have some knowledge of middle ear disease [the running ear], and we designate the disease as cronic whenever it has existed for more than a few weeks.

As a rule there is relatively little pain—nothing comparable to the acute pain that was present when the earache first appeared. While there may have been a high fever, loss of appetite, and headache at the start, most of these symptoms have subsided and Johnnie is all right except that now and then he will have a discharge from one or both ears that will show on the pillow or on a cotton plug in the ear canal.

The infection, of whatever type it may be, originated in the nose or throat and passed by way of the Eustachian tube into the mucous lined space in the skull which contains the delicate mechanism of hearing. Acute colds, measles, scarlet fever, influenza, diphtheria, sinus disease, bathing in infected pools, forcibly blowing the nose in the presence of a throat infection—all may be factors.

Treatment consists in drainage, just as is the case with any other collection of pus elsewhere in the body. Next in importance is building the resistance to normal, which means rest, sunshine, vitamins, good food, and probably some special blood building substance.

In chronic ear conditions attention should be given to the local inflammation in the throat. This includes not only tonsils and adenoid tissue but the openings of the Eustachian tubes and the sinuses.

The wide prevalence of measles during the last year has shown its vicious effects in thousands of cases of running ears. In many instances one or more of the bones of hearing will be destroyed. Sometimes cells from the lining of the middle ear will be shed in relatively large masses.

In most cases of chronic ear infection the hearing is impaired. At times the patient will hear better than at others, as the ear happens to be filled or cleared of discharged materials. Permanent damage to hearing usually depends upon the promptnes with which the infection is drained; in other words, how much destruction has occurred as the result of pressure.

The treatment of running ears should be in the hands of skilled physicinas. There is so much danger of deafness, of mastoid disease, and even of brain involvement that unnecessary risks should not be invited. In some cases the discharge will not cease until the mastoid cells have been opened and cleaned out surgically.

Only through better training of specialists in the management of acute and chronic ear disease will we make any great headway against deafness. Chronic dischargnig ears and neglected mastoid infection lay the groundwork for total or partial loss of hearing.

Jefferson Park Boasts Home Of Model Type

English Tudor Residence Built By J. H. Poladian on Exhibit.

Jefferson Park, exclusive residential section of Alexandria, Va., is an animated scene these days. Crowds are going there to see the new model home sponsored by The Washington Post, calling attention to this cool, wooded community.

The presentation house is owned and was designed and built by J. H. Poladian and is being offered by the M. H. Barry organization. This residence is priced at $9,850. It will be open to visitation daily until 9 p. m. until further notice. It is furnished by Hutchison, Inc., and draped by John F. Ligon.

Poladian, who was a builder of much costlier homes for many years, has transferred the benefits of his experience to the model home and its neighboring dwellings of moderate prices. The home is of stately English Tudor architecture, and is built of stone, brick and cypress wood.

This dwelling may be reached by the following route: Over Arlington Memorial Bridge to the front of Arlington Cemetery, then left on the upper road to Alexandria to the intersection of Russell road and Mount Vernon avenue. Here, turn right on Russell road to the entrance of Jefferson Park and follow the signs leading to the dwelling.

Deets Pickett Sees Prohibition Return

Denounces Use of Lincoln Speech in Beer Ad.

The return of Federal prohibition is inevitable as a result of present policies of the liquor traffic, believes Deets Pickett, research secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington.

Pickett yesterday joined with Representative Francis D. Culkin, of New York, in denouncing the use of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in a Nation-wide broadcast advertising a brand of beer. According to the research secretary, Representative Culkin (Republican), inquired in a letter to Anning S. Prall, of the Federal Radio Communications, if "the power to withhold a license can not be used some way so that this shameless performance will not be repeated?"

"It might be thought," Pickett commented yesterday, "that with the door barely closed upon national prohibition the liquor traffic would show some restraint. It is showing none. The only alternative to prohibition is a liquor traffic stripped of all privileges of trade promotion and of the incentive involved in private profit."

Four Killed in Auto By Train in Michigan

Caro, Mich., June 16 (AP).—Four persons were killed and a 6-year-old child may die as the result of a grade-crossing crash 18 miles southwest of here today.

The dead are Dr. B. A. Teporteen, 45, Pontiac; his brother, Aaron T. Teporteen, 40, Detroit; Mrs. Evcrista Cullen, Detroit, a sister of the two men; Miss Elizabeth Vanden Brooks, 22, Bay City, a niece.

Mrs. Cullen's daughter, Frances, was reported near death in a hospital.

The five were riding in a car which was struck by a westbound Michigan Central train on the Saginaw-Bay City branch line. The accident occurred on a crossing near Richville, in Tuscola County.

Manslaughter Verdict In Slaying at Chicago

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—A criminal court jury today returned a manslaughter verdict against Thomas Cronin, 27, whose 8-year-old son, Tommy, had testified against him at his trial for the slaying of William Bahnfieth, 40.

Judge E. I. Frankhauser will pass sentence June 25. The maximum penalty is 14 years imprisonment.

Cronin, president of a coal teamsters' union, pleaded the "unwritten law." Admitting he shot Bahnfieth, an oil salesman, in the Cronin home April 5. He alleged he acted because his wife, Mae, preferred Bahnfieth.

Court Asserts War Ended July 2, 1921

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 16.—A court ruling here of wide import to former service men holds that, although hostilities may have ended with the signing of the Armistice on November 11, 1918, the World War was not officially concluded until Congress so declared by joint resolution July 2, 1921.

Superior Judge Emmett Wilson made this decision in the case of Ford M. Kaiser, who served in the Army subsequent to the Armistice and claimed $1,000 property tax exemption allowed war veterans.

Kaiser brought suit against the Los Angeles County assessor, asserting that he enlisted in the Army on May 13, was honorably discharged three years later and so was entitled to the exemption.

Roy C. Kaiser, attorney and brother of the plaintiff, expressed belief it would be possible to obtain a Federal bonus certificate for him and others who had served prior to congressional action.

Elks Leave Tonight For Showboat Cruise

Elks and their friends will turn out en masse tonight in their third annual showboat cruise on the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington. The boat leaves the Seventh street wharves at 8:30, returning at midnight. Tickets for the affair, which is open to the public, may be obtained at the dock.

Also on board will be a galaxy of stage and night club stars. A group of boys from the Boys Club sponsored by the Metropolitan Police Department will give a brief exhibition of boxing, wrestling and tumbling.

Banner Exhibit Of Tiny Planes Ready to Open

District League Officials Enthusiastic Over Show Starting Wednesday.

The forthcoming scale model contest and exhibit to be held under the auspices of the District Model Aircraft League from this Wednesday to June 29 will eclipse contests of previous years, it was predicted yesterday by officials in charge of the contest.

More interest has been manifested this year than heretofore and many Washington youths have placed exhibits in the contest. Several who have won first prizes have had their models placed in the permanent exhibits in the aircraft building of the museum.

Lindbergh Their Idol.

"Many of the youngsters who have Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as their idol, and who are air-minded in their own right, spend hundreds of working hours each year to have a model placed in this exhibit," Mr. Garber said.

"It is encouraging to see the enthusiasm exhibited by the youngsters, all of whom place splendid models in the contest. Each year the models vary in size, some being so small they may be placed in a match box, while others are 3 and 4 feet long. This display of models will be in the foyer of the National Museum, and it is a revelation to some persons to see the types of aircraft sent in during each contest.

"Of course, only exhibition models will be entered, and a champion placque will be awarded the best all-round model exhibited in any class. A copy of this placque will be placed in the museum also."

Big Exhibit Forecast.

John H. Williams, supervisor of model aircraft, also predicted the contest this year would surpass those held in former years.

The rules call for the following exhibits:

Class A—9-inch wing spread. Class B—"Museum class," models built to ¾-inch scale (1-16 size). Class C—Over 9 inches, except ¾-inch scale. Junior group, under 16; senior group, 16 or over on June 1.

The list of awards as announced last night will be: First, second and third places in each class and each group, 18 prizes in all, to be tools and model-building materials. Champion plaque to be awarded to the best all-around model exhibited in any class or group. Models should be brought to the new Museum building June 19, 3:30 to 4 p. m., and on June 20 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon. Models to be reclaimed June 28 from 3 to 4 p. m. and on June 29, from 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon.

Grain Operator Faces Charges At Hearing Here

Howell to Offer Defense of His Trading Actions on Chicago Board.

By the Associated Press.

Government charges that Thomas M. Howell "cornered" the corn market in the summer of 1931 in violation of the grain futures act yesterday were brought to the Capital for oral arguments before the Grain Futures Administration.

Howell, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, denied the charges and any violation of law in hearings at Chicago in January.

Today, both the Government and Howell will make oral arguments before the Grain Futures Commission—Attorney General Cummings and Secretaries Wallace and Roper. Afterward, the commission will take the case under advisement.

Wallace's complaint against Howell alleged that he traded through a group of friends and relatives to avoid violation of an agreement between the Board of Trade and the Grain Futures Administration, whereby the administration agreed to notify the board when a member reported open contracts in any one future of any one grain equal to, or in excess of, 5,000,000 bushels.

Howell, through relatives and friends, the complaint alleged, kept individual purchasse below 5,000,000 bushels. But it contended that on June 27, 1931, the "Howell group" had contracts in July corn of 8,310,000 bushels.

On July 18, it was charged, the group held warehouse receipts for all the corn in Chicago deliverable on Board of Trade contracts. The concentration of contracts was said to have resulted in an advance of 14 cents a bushel for a three-day period, in the price of July futures.

Exhibit House In Suburb Set Among Trees

Many See Home Offered By Post in Country Club Grove.

Many homeseekers, tourists and sightseers were agreeably surprised by a visit yesterday to the beautiful development of Country Club Grove. They went there following announcement that the latest model home of The Washington Post would open in that community.

The most recent home presentation of this newspaper is located on Forest lane, in the heart of this charming residential project of the Virginia Gardens Development Corporation, owners, builders and developers of the operation.

The display house, furnished by Hutchison, Inc., is a handsome structure of brick and frame containing a studio bedroom, two baths, two fireplaces, club lounge, built-in garage, steel casement windows. It is situated on a 60-foot landscaped lot with tall trees.

The home will be open daily from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. The development it features is only 15 minutes' drive from the White House. It is reached by going out Canal road, crossing Chain Bridge and proceeding straight ahead on Glebe road for a mile. Here, a left turn is made at Forest lane.

A FAMOUS GOLFER enjoys a Camel! Tommy Armour, a Camel smoker of long standing, says: "I've smoked Camels for years, without jittery nerves or cutting down my wind. I'd walk a mile for a Camel...any day!"

Read below what these famous athletes say about their experiences in smoking Camels

A suggestion: Follow the athletes in your search for cigarette mildness. They can't trifle with healthy nerves—"condition"—wind. The cigarette they smoke must be mild.

Tommy Armour, golf champion, says: "Camels never bother my nerves or shorten my wind—convincing evidence that Camels are mild."

Mel Ott, heavy-hitting outfielder of the New York Giants, reports: "My experience is that Camels are so mild they never get my wind."

Stubby Kruger, water polo and swimming star: "Camels are mild and gentle. They don't interfere with my wind." And Amy Lou Oliver, diver, and Lester Stoefen, tennis star, agree with Pete Knight, the rodeo champion, who says: "Camels—there's a smoke so mild it never spoils your timing, never cuts down your wind, never gets you out of condition."

A mildness that will please you too!

Camels are made from costlier tobaccos. They are mild, cool, gentle on the throat. Smoke them all you wish. Camels don't upset your nerves ...or tire your taste. And athletes find that Camels do not get their wind.

Crisis Abroad To Be Debated By Institute

Public Affairs Group to Meet at University Starting June 30.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 16.—Discussions of the internal problems of European countries by authorities on international relations will form an important phase of the first week's program of the Institute of Public Affairs, which opens at the University of Virginia June 30.

In the round-table forum, which is entitled "European Relations—Rebuilding Peace," attempts will be made by prominent spokesmen to explain Germany's economic problems, the political questions confronting France, and Italy's search for security through colonial expansion. The daily sessions will be presided over by Dr. J. Anton de Hass, professor of international relationships at Harvard University.

Rotary Clubs Sponsors.

The round table is being sponsored by the Rotary clubs of Virginia as part of their international good-will program. The committee of State Rotary leaders who are assisting Dr. Charles G. Maphis, director of the institute, in planning the conference, consists of the Rev. Paul D. Bowden, of Warrenton, governor of the fifty-sixth district of Rotary International; Lamar H. Timmons, of Charlottesville, and Charles K. Brown and John B. Crowle, jr., both of Staunton.

All Rotary Clubs in Virginia have been requested to name institute delegates, and chapters in other States have been invited to send official representatives.

Foreign Spokesmen Invited.

While the speakers' list has not been completed, a distinguished group of educators and representatives from international business organizations is scheduled to appear before the round table. Dr. Maphis has announced that it is likely that official spokesmen for the several foreign countries will accept invitations to present the points of view of the nations they represent.

In addition to general discussions of European governmental policies, studies will be made of national debts and monetary stabilization, labor's stake in peace, and reciprocal trade treaties and the revival of world trade.

Among those who will speak on the program are Garrau Dombasle, commercial attache of the French embassy; Dr. William E. Lingelbach, of the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Karl Brandt, of the New School for Social Research, New York; Dr. George W. Edwards, dean of Commerce, College of the City of New York; Dr. Gerhard Colm, of the New School for Social Research; William S. Swingle, of the National Association of Credit Men; David I. Saposs, of the Twentieth Century Fund, New York; Otto S. Bayer, of Washington; Dr. Alvin H. Hansen, of the State Department, and Edward Jenkins, vice president of General Motors Export Corporation.

Boy Found Dead After Family Row

Had Threatened to Kill Brother for Drinking.

By the Associated Press.

Branchville, Md., June 16.—A 19-year-old boy, who threatened to kill his younger brother for coming home intoxicated early today was found dead of a bullet wound a few hours later.

The boy, Ray Ellison, was found in the yard by a milkman. A pistol lay nearby, and Magistrate George S. Phillips returned a verdict of suicide.

The younger brother, Harry Ellison, 16, told police Ray had threatened to kill him for coming home intoxicated and had threatened to kill himself. Harry said he escaped by jumping from a second-story window. The boys were living with their sister. Their home was in Huntington, W. Va.

Westminster Property Sold for Back Taxes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., June 16.—Four properties, the first to be offered for public sale for taxes in arrears this year, were sold at the courthouse here yesterday for $927.50. The highest amount paid for a single property was $530. According to C. Diocesan Rally Registers 750 Virginia Pupils

Students' Mission Crusade Starts Annual Session in Norfolk School.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., June 17.—More than 750 delegates were registered tonight for the fifth annual diocesan convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, which opened with a group reception in the auditorium of Sacred Heart School.

Delegates from throughout Virginia heard welcoming addresses by the Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas E. Waters, pastor of Sacred Heart Parish, speaking on behalf of the Catholic clergy, and Gay Battaglia, diocesan leader, speaking for the Norfolk laity. The session began at 8 p. m., the afternoon having been given over to registration and housing of delegates.

Tomorrow's sessions will see the finals of the oratorical contests in school and veteran units at 8 p. m. in the Blair Junior High School auditorium. Ten winners in the deanery preliminaries will compete for two cash awards on the subject: "Martyrs' Blood in Virginia."

The contestants for the school units are Charles Joseph Lillis, Sacred Heart School, Winchester; George H. Milly, St. Joseph's School, Petersburg; Julian Pleasants, Holy Trinity School, Norfolk; Jack Schad, Holy Cross School, Lynchburg, and Miss Nellie Schroth, St. Mary's School, Alexandria. Veteran unit contestants are J. Robert Carey, Alexandria; Miss Charlotte O'Hara, Roanoke; Edward L. Thomas, Richmond, and Kenneth Lawrence, Norfolk.

The judges, all Washington attorneys, will be James G. Blaine-Fitzgerald, John J. Ccanlan and Lester Steiner.

Other sessions tomorrow include a specially arranged solemn high mass at Sacred Heart Church at 10:30 and the opening business session in the afternoon.

New Fire House Has All Gadgets But No Engines

Staff of 3 Has Spent Nine Months Just Sitting in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 16.—Baltimore's newest and most modern firehouse has chromium-plated showers, the latest signal equipment, shiny brass poles, self-closing doors, eight beds, lots of automatic equipment—but no fire engines.

The $40,000 stately pile of red brick, partly financed by PWA funds, has been in operation nine months, staffed by three firemen each "sitting" an eight-hour shift as watchman, but the only working of its multitude of shiny devices is a single telephone.

Municipal officials today were eagerly handing each other the responsibility of revealing why rolling equipment had not been installed in the building, but other than a statement that engines would arrive "soon," no definite answer was available.

"We don't do much because there's nothing to do," said Fireman Thomas J. McClain, who was assigned to the lonely corridors with two other firemen nine months ago. "We read or sit outside and once in a while answer the phone. Pretty soft."

Church Program Held at Lynchburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., June 16.—Approximately 1,000 members of the Christian churches of Virginia attended the laymen's day exercises at Lynchburg College here today, preliminary to the 103d annual convention of that church. Man Tossed by Car Against Truck Dies

Two Truckers Held, Auto Driver Is Released.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Johnstown, W. Va., June 16.—Samuel Shanholtzer, 54, of Hampshire County, W. Va., who has been living with a daughter here, was fatally injured late last night in an automobile accident, details of which are not entirely clear to investigators.

Information is that he was standing beside an unlighted truck in the center of the State highway, after returning from Martinsburg with Leslie M. Dick and E. R. Courtney, of Cherryrun. An automobile driven by James H. Jones, of Hedgesville, approached, Jones not seeing the truck until almost upon it.

Police believe Shanholtzer was knocked against the truck by the Jones car and sustained a head injury which resulted in death in a Martinsburg hospital. Courtney and Dick, the latter the driver of the truck who was found to have no license, were held pending further investigation. Jones was not held.

Shanholtzer will be buried Wednesday near Romney, W. Va. He is survived by the widow, two brothers, William and John Shanholtzer, three sisters, two sons and a daughter.

Night Watchman Held In Annapolis Shooting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 16.—Marioni Envocci, 40, was lodged in Anne Arundel County Jail late last night, charged with shooting George Mitchell, 38, of Baltimore. The shooting took place in Market Square, near the city dock. Envocci, night watchman for a construction company engaged in sewerage work, was said by police to have been drinking and engaged in an argument with Mitchell, who had been visiting friends in a traveling carnival in Market Square.

Envocci was said to have fired two shots from a revolver, one of which entered Mitchell's hip. Mitchell is in Annapolis Emergency Hospital. His condition is not thought to be serious.

Park Parley To Convene At Skyland

Gov. Peery to Speak at National Conference on Conservation.

Hundreds Due to Attend Four-Day Discussion Opening Tuesday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 16.—Gov. Peery and other State officials will discuss conservation work and park planning with several hundred delegates from all sections of the country at the four-day session of the National Conference on State Parks, which will open Tuesday at Skyland in the Shenandoah National Park.

Following an informal meeting Tuesday afternoon, at which time J. J. Dirzulaitis, chief engineer of the Virginia water resources division, will direct the delegates to new mountain water installations, Col. Richard Lieber, of Indianapolis, Ind., president, will formally open the conference Wednesday morning, and Gov. Peery will greet members and visitors in an address of welcome Wednesday afternoon.

The detailed program was announced here today by Mrs. Beatrice Ward Nelson, executive secretary of the national association. She is the wife of Prof. Wilbur A. Nelson, head of the geology department at the University of Virginia.

Will Recall the Past.

In his presidential address, entitled "Ten Years Ago," Col. Lieber will review the proceedings of the 1925 conference, which met at Skyland. Following Col. Lieber's talk, William E. Carson, of Riverton, vice president of the conference, will give an account of the beginning of a State park system in Virginia, and Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia commission on conservation and development, will trace the future of State parks.

Also listed for Wednesday morning is a discussion of park policies, or the mechanics of park system administration, which will be led by Charles G. Sauders, general manager of the Cook County park system in Illinois, and H. S. Wagner, director of the Akron, Ohio, metropolitan park district.

In the afternoon, Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, will talk on emergency projects in National and State parks. Other speakers will be A. E. Demaray, assistant director of the National Park Service; R. M. Evans, of the U. S. Forest Service, and Horace M. Albright, former director of the National Park Service.

Recreation Planned.

The conference will convene for a recreational session Wednesday night at the President's camp at Rapidan.

Thursday morning Conrad Wirth, also an asistant director of the National Park Service, will lead a discussion on what constitutes a park system, or the factors that govern the selection of areas for a park and recreational system of a State.

Following a luncheon in White Oak Canyon, Herbert Evison, supervisor of State park emergency conservation work, will direct a forum on the basic law requirements necesary for a properly functioning park organization. Chief speakers will be Charles P. Wilber, head of the division of forests and parks of New Jersey; A. H. Smith, State forester of South Carolina, and John Nolen, of Cambridge, Mass.

Banquet on Thursday.

Howard B. Bloomer, of Detroit, will preside at a banquet Thursday night, when Jay Winston Johns, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, will address the conference on the place of historical shrines in State parks. Dr. Pat Morris Neff, president of Baylor University, and former Governor of Texas, and Stanley Coulter, of Indianapolis, Ind., also will speak.

The conference will adjourn Friday following a trip of inspection to Fredericksburg, where the delegates will be conducted on a tour of Chancellorsville and other old battlefields.

Henneberger Relatives Win in Will Contest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., June 16.—A verdict in favor of the 33 relatives contesting the will of the late Edward P. Henneberger, of near Greencastle, was returned by a jury in Franklin County courts Friday night.

Henneberger's relatives contended that he was unduly influenced in making his will, which bequeathed his estate, valued at $6,500, to Mrs. Ivan R. Finfrock, his niece, who with her husband lived with the elderly farmer.

Boonsboro Will Rededicate Monument to Washington

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boonsboro, Md., June 16.—Citizens of this town are planning a unique rededication this Fourth of July, provided restoration of the monument to George Washington on the mountain above here has been completed. CCC workers, employed for months in rebuilding the monument, expect to have the shaft completed by that date.

One hundred and eight years ago on July 4 the original monument, believed to be the first ever erected to the memory of Washington, was dedicated by citizens of Boonsboro. Descendants of the original dedicators will be present when the monument is rededicated.

A new highway has been constructed to the monument, which is surrounded by a park, the ground for which was presented by the people of this town.

The original tablet, which bears the inscription "Erected to the Memory of Washington, July 4, 1827, by the citizens of Boonsboro," has been located and will be placed near its original location on the restored monument facing the valley, while a new bronze tablet bringing the history of the monument up to date, also will be erected.

The account of the first dedication as recorded in history tells how several soldiers who fought in the Revolutionary War fired a volley, and an address was made by an Episcopal minister of Boonsboro. At the end of 50 years the structure had fallen into poor repair, but, through the efforts of the Odd Fellows Lodge of this town, a fund was raised and the monument was repaired in 1882 and rededicated with the late Gov. William T. Hamilton, of Maryland, making the address.

Lightning is believed to have struck the monument some years later and it began to disintegrate, finally falling apart. It was in this condition that the CCC found it in 1934, when work was started to restore it.

Alms Basin Is Stolen In Church Burglary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., June 16.—Thieves broke into Grace Episcopal Church sometime this week and escaped with the valuable communion service; the alms basin which was a memorial to the late Lloyd Williams, brother of Goodwin H. Williams, of Clarke County; a valuable small gold cross set with jewels, and the contents of a chest in the vestry room. The loss was discovered yesterday morning by Miss Ollie Thomas, chairman of the Altar Guild, as she was making preparations for today's service.

The loss was estimated at $1,000.

St. Marys City Marks 301st Anniversary

Gov. and Mrs. Nice See Rites in Historic Settlement.

Outdoor Ceremonies to Follow Services in Church.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Marys City, Md., June 16.—Here where English cavaliers built the first little Statehouse of Maryland, where Leonard Calvert, first Lord Baltimore, first Governor of the proprietary State, held forth, 500 men and women celebrated the 301st anniversary of their State under a hot sun this afternoon.

From Baltimore came the present Governor, Harry W. Nice, and his wife to join in the fete. They came in the State yacht, the Dupont, swinging slowly down Chesapeake Bay, turning gently up the tiny St. Marys River, and docking at its wharf at 1:30 p. m.

To a crowd in white dresses and flannel suits, gathered in the spacious churchyard, where monuments and tombstones recalled the memory of Maryland's founders, Gov. Nice called for reverence for the history of the Free State.

Unity Urged.

And then he called for unity of the State's citizens, saying:

"I am the Governor of Maryland and, as such, I am deeply interested in the history of St. Marys City, and in the founders of this State.

"I am the Governor, but I do not wish to succeed myself. Rather do I ask and hope with all by heart for the support of all the Christians of Maryland, regardless of creed, regardless of politics, be they Democrats or Republicans. I ask their support that we may make Maryland a better State, a better place to live in."

Earlier in the day the first celebration had been marked by services in the church, the Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, whose broad yard now covers half of what was the first city. Then the Rev. Nelson McConony preached.

Outdoor Program.

But the afternoon ceremony was held in the open. Dr. G. Warfield Hobbs, chairman of the national publicity council of the Episcopal Church, was the first speaker.

Following the addresses, the Governor and his wife visited the replica of the first State House, crammed with paintings and mementoes. They had been here before, but never had they visited the building. Gov. Nice said he hoped to repeat the visit at greater length.

Then he and Mrs. Nice were entertained for an hour at St. Mary's Manor, adjoining the little town, the estate of Leonard Calvert, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Spence Howard and Mr. and Mrs. James Bennett.

Gov. and Mrs. Nice then boarded the Dupont to spend the night cruising on the Potomac and Chesapeake Bay, returning to Baltimore with the dawn.

Jury Costs $50 a Day In Liquor Plot Trial

Roanoke, Va., June 16 (AP).—With jury cost alone amounting to $50 daily, the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators will enter the ninth week tomorrow.

Northumberland Studies Relief.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., June 16.—The Board of Supervisors of Northumberland County will meet at the courthouse at Heathsville Wednesday to consider the advisability of continuing relief work in the county under the VERA. The work of the VERA was abandoned in Northumberland County during the summer last year.

44 Runs Made as Nats and Browns Split Marathon Twin Bill

With Shirley Povich

JIMMY BRADDOCK—there's a man for you—said he guessed somebody had to stay home with the kids and that's why Mrs. Braddock wasn't around at his hotel the morning after he had won the world championship with fists loaded for Baer. Plain, wholesome Jimmy Braddock. He lends a refreshing note to the entire prize-ring industry.

POVICH.

With Braddock on the throne the world heavyweight championship has gone negative again. Jimmy is a fighting man, devoid of sidelines except the love of his family. Not since Jim Jeffries passed his title along to Tommy Ryan in 1908, has the prize ring been ruled by a man who fought not only for the love of it, but for the necessity of it, and who fits into the picture as becomingly as Braddock.

Thumb the pages of heavyweight history following the Jeffries regime and you learn of Jack Johnson, Jess Willard, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Primo Carnera, Max Baer and—Jimmy Braddock. Each but the last, in turn, wasted his popularity by detaching himself from the public's conception of a fighting man—a world champion.

And now it's Braddock—plain, plodding Jimmy Braddock who finally fills the bill. No stage star is Braddock, no Broadwayite, no social climber, but a fighting man at ease only when he's in the ring or home with the wife and kids. He's a throw-back to the "dese and dose" days of pugilism, perhaps, but that won't be held against him, not in the light of his perseverance. . In fact, the public probably likes it. In fact, they're probably glad. Folks were tiring of Max Baer.

JACK JOHNSON never was the people's choice as a champion. Of his skill there was never any doubt, but his overthrow of Jeffries and Nordic supremacy in the prize ring was always resented. And Johnson did not conduct himself along the lines calculated to enhance his meager popularity. His interracial marriage, legal scraps and tours of Europe in kingly style removed him from the popular conception of what a world's champion plug-ugly should be.

Neither did Jess Willard fill the bill. From the whites he elicited prayerful thanks that he had ended the reign of Johnson, but until he got himself knocked out by Jack Dempsey, he never captured the imagination of the fight public. Long tours with circuses only seemed to emphasize that Willard was a curio, gifted with inordinate size. There was nothing of the killer about him.

And then, Jack Dempsey. For a few brief years Dempsey had the Nation's fans at his feet. He was the killer, the reformed hobo who had made good. Dempsey, indeed, was idolized. And then—slacker charges gnawed away at his popularity. He married the glamorous Estelle Taylor, had his bull-doggish nose lifted and replaced with a Hollywood model. Gradually he emerged from his killer role to become a softy in the eyes of the public. When he lost to Gene Tunney as a weary old champion the Nation's fandom did not care.

Tunney never was popular. The die-hards who revered Dempsey always resented Tunney's triumph. Gene was the first champion ever to take the title with his opponent on his feet. The long count at Chicago didn't help Tunney. He never liked fighting, admitted he used the game as a vehicle to attain a fortune. And then he married the millionairess, Polly Lauder, turned country gentleman and retired. Moreover, he had been a counter-puncher. The fans couldn't go for that.

AFTER Tunney, the heavyweight championship hit even lower levels as it was inherited successively by Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera. The good citizens never did take any of them to their hearts.

Schmeling was a foreigner who couldn't talk their language, and he won the title while sitting down, claiming a foul. That was not calculated to endear him to the fans. Back to Germany he went with his dubious crown, and the public didn't give a hoot.

In Schmeling's first defense of his title, Sharkey won it—on points, and close at that. But Sharkey the people knew as a braggart, an inveterate claimer of fouls, who did nothing to increase his popularity after winning from Harry Wills on a foul. Sharkey gave most of his time to the flora and fauna on his Massachusetts estate. He was a horticulturist. Outside of Boston he was unpopular.

Primo Carnera's short reign did nothing to enhance the value of the heavyweight crown. Folks knew him best as an accident of birth. He was too big, and when Max Baer knocked him out, it was fine.

Rough, tough Maxie Baer promised to restore the glamour of the heavyweight title. He was a puncher, a killer, and he had a sense of humor. But he went stagey, he became soft, and his humor became incessant clowning. He might have been the champion ideal, but he didn't take it seriously.

Pop Time Makes Comeback Gloriously on Princeton Track

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 16. — Late yesterday afternoon at Princeton, N. J., was really a wonderful experience and I am happy that some 40,000 to 45,000 sweltering people shared it with me. But at that perhaps they and I were not cheering for the same thing. There was a great vibrating of vocal chords that set the air in and above Palmer Stadium to echoing. The crowd roared as the mile-runners came around the last turn in the classic race and Black Jack Lovelock, the London medical student from New Zealand, looked Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, in the eye and ran away from him.

As I remember, I was yelling, too, but later I wondered whether the 40,000-odd and I were yelling for the same thing. I was cheering the magnificent victory of the old gentleman with the long, white whiskers, the bald head, the hour glass and the scythe, old Pop Ttime. He has been taking an awful kicking around of late, but he made a great come-back at Princeton yesterday.

The time for the great mile was 4:11.2. Last year Glenn Cunningham, running on the same track, set the world's record of 4:06.7, finishing, as he termed it, still full of running, and for a year the papers have been full of the 4:04 mile and the chances of its being run. At times I found such utter disdain of a rather grand and durable old gentleman, this same Father Time, a little depressing. But he really came into his own yesterday. The clock showed 4.5 seconds over Cunningham's record when the race was done. Nor was that all. Old Pop was magnificent all through the day. He yielded nothing. A young fellow named Allen came within a tenth of a second of tying the 120-yard high hurdle record, but in a race that is short a tenth of a second is a good substantial barrier and Old Pop wasn' tworried.

They attacked Old Pop on five fronts, the 120-yard high hurdles, the 440-yard run, the half-mile, the mile and the 2-mile run, and the old gentleman just grinned his way through. His greatest worry, occasionally was the mile with Cunningham who had made a sucker out of him last year, Bethrone and Lovelock, three of his most persistent and dangerous enemies, attacking him at once. But the first quarter was slow, 64.9 seconds to be exact, and Old Pop was away to a good lead. And by the time the runners swept into the back stretch on the final lap Old Pop was so far ahead that it wasn't even a contest.

It must have been rather nerve-wracking to big Glenn Cunningham the way slender Black Jack Lovelock pattered after him four times around the oval until was ready to bid him farewell. V few athletes do that to Cunningham and last. Lovelock certainly must have

Stone Is Star Of 17-8 Win, 10-9 Loss

Linke Remains in 2nd Because He's Only Pitcher Left.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—The Nats ran their winning streak to three straights this afternoon by taking the first game of a double-header with the Browns, and then started a new losing streak by finishing on the smaller end of the finale. The scores were 17 to 8 and 10 to 9.

That 500-mile grind staged at Indianapolis every year is just a breeze compared with the marathon they had here this afternoon. Briefly, the Nats collected 34 hits, while the Browns were getting 23, and used three pitchers. St. Louis was a little better in this respect with six. But Manager Bucky Harris accepted this philosophically enough—he'll have his chance in Cleveland.

Johnny Stone was the batting star of the afternoon, although it was a line drive into the left-field stands off the bat of Belve Bean that proved to be the winning run in the opener. Stone blasted the Browns' pitching corps for two triples and three singles in the first game, and followed through with two doubles, a single and two walks in the second.

Hits Aplenty.

Every man on the team had a hand in the hitting, but Stone's work was something to delight the eye. Every hit a solid clout that threatened to knock the bleachers down.

Whitehill started the first game, but had to run to cover early in the fourth inning after staggering through the first three in minor league style. Oddly enough he left two men on bases, and Jules Solters, the first man to face Bean, tied up the proceedings at 8-all with a lusty wallop into the bleachers.

Bean's relief work was of high caliber. In trouble only twice, he worked his way out of the difficulty with apparent ease and was burning them through at the finish.

Ed Linke started and finished the second game, but finished only because Manager Bucky Harris had no one to replace him in the second inning when the Browns hit everything but the chubby one's wild pitches, piled up 6 runs and boosted their total to 9 runs for two innings. Not bad.

First Game.

Johnny Stone sounded the keynote of the afternoon's activities with a screaming triple down the right-field line. Myer followed with a double to left and was safe at third after a rundown on Travis' roller to second. Bejma threw wildly to Clift on the play. Buddy scored on Powell's scratch hit to short.

It was another triple by Stone that cleared the pathways after they became clogged with Senators in the second. Bluege and Whitehill singled and Kuhel was safe at first on Knott's error before Stone connected. Knott was excused for the rest of the afternoon and Andrews went to the Baltimore, June 16. — Joyce Wethered, four times women's golf champion of England, teamed up with Johnny Dawson, of Chicago, in an exhibition match at the Baltimore Country Club today, shot a 78, eight under the women's club record, and gained an even finish against Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, and Roland Mackenzie, of Washington.

Red Sox Bow Twice as Indian Ace Stars on the Mound.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, June 16. — Mel Harder, ace Indian right-hander, reached a new peak of performance today by holding the Boston Red Sox to a feeble single in the second inning of the first game of a double header.

The Indians won, 4 to 0, and went on to wallop the Sox, 9 to 3, in the second contest.

It was Harder's ninth victory against three losses this season and contributed to a steadily improving record. Harder, who joined the Indians as an 18-year-old boy in 1928, pitched 20 victories last season while losing 11.

Averill Leads Attack.

In last year's inter-league game, he pitched one-hit ball for five innings against the Nationals. His only period out of the majors was six weeks with New Orleans in 1929, when the Indians recalled him.

Earl Averill, Indian centerfielder, was the star of Harder's support. He doubled in the third to score Berger and smacked a homer in the seventh with none on. He and Trosky also scored two runs for the Indians in the fifth.

The Indians drove Welch from the mound in the fourth of the second game when Brenzel, Berger, Hudlin, Knickerbocker and Vosmik

Tigers Defeat A's Again, 13 to 3

Rowe Holds Rivals as His Teammates Collect 17 Safeties.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, June 16.—The Detroit Tigers pounded two Philadelphia pitchers for 17 hits today to triumph over the Athletics, 13 to 3. It was the third defeat for the A's in as many games in the current series.

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe set the visitors down with six scattered hits to win his second successive victory and his fifth in ten starts this season. He held them hitless until the fifth.

Allen Benton, who started for the A's, went to the showers in the fourth, after he had allowed seven runs, 11 hits and a walk. Caster held Detroit in check until the eighth, when he was touched for four hits and as many runs.

A feature of the game was the rivalry of Hank Greenberg and Bob Johnson for home run honors. The Philadelphia slugger slapped out his sixteenth of the season in the sixth, but the Tiger first-sacker maintained their tie by slamming one over the wall in the eighth.

Mrs. Moody Picked for Place On U. S. Wightman Cup Team

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Convinced that Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, on the strength of her showing in recent British tournaments, has regained satisfactory physical playing condition after an absence of two years from the courts, the United States Lawn Tennis Association today selected the great California star and five other players to form the nucleus of the 1935 Wightman Cup team.

The selection of Mrs. Moody, along with Helen Hull Jacobs, three times champion; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Carolin Babcock, Dorothy Andrus and Mrs. Ethel Burkhart Arnold, is only tentative. The team will be chosen ultimately a week before the international matches against an English side at Forest Hills, Long Island, on August 16 and 17.

Is Veteran of Teams.

Prior to her back injury which necessitated her retirement from competition in 1933, Mrs. Moody had been a member of all United States Wightman Cup teams from the inception of the international matches in 1923.

Her defeat last Friday by the hard-hitting Katherine Stammers, England's third-ranking player, in the semi-final round of the Kent tournament, failed to cause the members of the cup committee to change their mind about Mrs. Moody.

Her services will be more than welcome since only three other members named to this year's squad—Miss Jacobs, Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Babcock—have had previous Cup experience. Illness has forced the temporary retirement of Alice Marble and Josephine Cruickshank, who were members of last year's team.

Miss Jacobs No. 1.

The list of players chosen for the team trials, which will be held either in the nature of competition in Eastern tournaments or at one designated club such as Merion, where the Davis Cup team worked out, includes the first four ranking players of the country. Miss Jacobs is No. 1, Mrs. Fabyan, No. 2; Miss Babcock, No. 3, and Mrs. Andrus, No. 4. Mrs. Arnold is the top-ranking player on the Pacific Coast but is without national ranking this year.

Some surprise was occasioned by failure to include Jane Sharp, of California, the national indoor champion. It was pointed out, however, Miss Sharp has been advised by physicians to take a rest of several months after a strenuous winter and spring campaign.

"Other players may be added to the squad if their tournament records during the early season play warrant," the committee, of which Julian S. Myrick is chairman, said.

Czech Cup Team Victors.

Praha, June 16 (AP).—Czechoslovakia eliminated South Africa in the semifinal play of the Davis Cup European zone matches today, Roderich Menzel and J. Malecek defeating Norman Farquharson and Vernon Kirby, 9—11, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1, in doubles play.

Western Golf Is Won by Revolta

Fisher Is 8th to Lead Amateurs; Japanese Shoots 303.

By the United Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 16.—Johnny Revolta, 24-year-old Milwaukee professional, toured the Chain o' Lakes course of the South Bend Country Club twice in 73 today to win the Western Open Golf Tournament with 290 strokes, 6 over par.

Revolta took the lead at the end of the first 36 holes when he completed his second round in 70, 1 under par. At th eend of 54 holes h was leading by 1 stroke.

Willie Goggin, hard-hitting San Francisco pro, who was runner-up in the National P. G. A. meet two years ago, finished second with 294.

Goggin, after two mediocre first rounds, broke par by 3 strokes, to shoot a 68 in the morning and come within 1 stroke of tying Revolta at the three-quarter mark. His last five holes this afternoon were played in the rain, spoiling his chances to overcome the Milwaukee pro.

Nelson Third.

Byron Nelson, 23-year-old professional from Ridgewood, N. J., finished third with 296. He shot a 74 and a 75 today.

Dick Metz, professional at Mills Roads Country Club, Chicago, and Jimmy Thomson, Long Beach, Calif., runner-up in the National a week ago, tied for fourth place with 298. Metz was only one stroke behind Revolta at the half-way mark and was trailing by four strokes at the end of 54 holes. He took a 76 on the morning round and a 77 in the afternoon.

Thomson shot a par 71 on the afternoon round after taking 75 strokes in the morning.

Tommy Armour, Chicago; Bill Kaiser, Louisville, Ky.; Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, and Mark Fry, Los Angeles, all professionals, ended in a tie for fifth place with 299 each.

Takes 8 Strokes.

Ted Longworth, Portland Oreg. professional who was only one stroke behind Revolta at the end of 54 holes, finished in sixth place with 300 after a disastrous 82 on his final round. Longworth started to blow up on the fourth hole when he took eight strokes. He took six on the fifth and wound up with a 45 on the outgoing nine. He came back with 37, two over par. Longworth was among the leaders right from the start. He was in second place after the first round and in third position at the 36-hole mark.

Harry Cooper, Chicago, who won the Western Open last year after a 36-hole play-off with Ky Laffoon, dropped into seventh place with 301. He had rounds of 74-74-76-78.

Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, Ohio, the former Big Ten champion, finished first among the amateurs with 302, getting a 75 on his final round. His total score gave him a tie for eighth place with Irving Ottman, Louisville, Ky., pro, and Walter Hagen, Detroit, five times winner of the Western Open.

Hagen Ends With 83.

Hagen got off to a bad start when he shot the final round in 79. He came back with a 74 the second day and took a 74 and a 75 today.

Nakamura, smiling member of the Japanese team, turned in the best score of his group when he finished ninth with 303. Sonny Rouse, Chicago; Gene Kunes; Jef-

Easily Keeps Crown for 5th Year

By George Considine.

IT might have been hot on your sleeping porch yesterday afternoon but it was hotter at the Rock Creek Tennis Courts. In the latter phrase we're referring not to the weather but to Dooley Mitchell's scorching, two-fisted win over Bud Markey, former Notre Dame net captain, for his fifth City of Washington championship. The tell-tale scores were 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

Just prior to the men's finals, Nate Ritzenberg annexed the District Junior title by virtue of an easy 6—1, 8—6, 6—3 victory over Brother Allie, of Central High.

Mitchell was the racquet wizard of old as he relentlessly raked the with steaming break-neck wallops clay off both sides. The curly-haired Georgetowner simply could do no wrong. Time and again the close to 1,000 spectators, forgetting that after all it was just a tennis match, evinced ear-shattering enthusiasm.

Markey Played Well.

Game in the face of inevitable defeat, Bud Markey was playing well enough to beat anybody around. But with Dooley clicking on all cylinders, his efforts were about as futile as the spectators' chances of avoiding sunburn.

When you come right down to it, there is but one fitting description. Mitchell was hot. And to any kind of a tennis fan, that covers everything.

In the junior titular match Nate Ritzenberg proved himself decidedly superior to his younger brother in all departments. Stroking with cool, mechanical artistry his triumph was as crushing and undeniable as the main event.

Only in the second set, which went to deuce, was Allie's game even partially effective. Incidentally, this affair marked approximately the millionth time that the youngsters have played each other. This, added to a mighty torrid June afternoon, probably accounted for the passive exhibition.

The City of Washington doubles finale, which pits Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey against Ralph McElvenny and Tony Latona, will be run off next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Columbia Country Club courts.

Rain Washes Away 8-Run Yankee Lead

$50,000 Gate, Gehrig's Homer Also Lost.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 16.—A torrential rainstorm forced postponement of today's double-header between the New York Americans and the Chicago White Sox, and with the postponement washed away an 8-to-0 Yankee lead in the fourth inning, a $50,000 gate and Lou Gehrig's eighth home run of the season.

The Yankees had finished working Ted Lyons down for seven runs in their half of the fourth, and Mule Haas, first man up in the Sox half, had just doubled, when the terrific downpour started. A crowd of 50,000, near capacity and the third largest in White Sox history, waited hopefully as the rain abated, but after one hour and 40 minutes, Umpire Brick Owens called the game.

A crew of groundkeepers tried to dry the base lines with gasoline bonfires, but gusts of rain made the effort futile.

Phils Defeat Pirates Again By 12-4 Score

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—The Phillies knocked out their second successive victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today, 12 to 4.

Pounding three Pirate hurlers for 14 hits, which included home runs by Haslin, Allen and Johnny Moore, the Phils took an early lead and were never headed. John Pezzulo, young left-hander of the Phillies, went the entire route for the winners and, although knicked for 13 blows, was seldom in danger.

Australians Beaten By Nazi Cup Team

McGrath Bows to German After Hard Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 16.—Germany eliminated Australia in the third round of the Davis Cup matches today, Gottfried von Cramm, German ace, defeating Vivian McGrath, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Australia, which had been favored by many to fight through to the challenge round, was faced with the task of sweeping two singles matches today to stay in the competition. McGrath's valiant stand against the hard-hitting German was unexpected. Tennis critics had guessed that Von Cramm would defeat the Australian easily.

guillotine and pitched a fly to Myer that enabled Stone to get home.

The boys started working on Andrews in the fourth when Kuhel and Stone singled with two down. Myer moved in on the only unoccupied base with four balls and Travis promptly scored the first two with a pop single to center.

But St. Louis was swinging its bats with telling effect in its half of the first three innings, and Whitehill was thumbed to the showers in the fourth after walking Clift and West. Bean replaced him. Jules Solters connected with his third pitch and parked it in the left field stands for a home run that tied the count at 8-all.

Bean, however, was partially avenged when he duplicated the feat at the beginning of the sixth inning. This later proved to be the winning run.

Bean pitched creditably in chalking up his first victory of the year. The Brownies seemed to be hitting solidly but always drove the ball straight into the waiting hands of a Washington player. Bean wobbled just a trifle in the sixth and again in the eighth, but this was of little consequence in view of his mates' consistent slugging.

Second Game.

The Senators, in the second game, scored two runs in the first inning, but the Browns scored three.

Kuhel and Stone doubled and Johnny scored when Heath pegged wildly to Clift at third in an attempt to get Stone.

Singles by Clift and Coleman, and two baggers by West and Burnett gave St. Louis three runs.

Six runs were scored in the second before Ed Linke retired the side. The trouble started with a pass to Heath, and before it was over Clift, West, Burns and Burnett had singled, Solters doubled and Powell had erred.

Washington made five runs in the third and Walkup retired in favor of Knott.

Myer singled; then came a triple by Travis, Powell's single, Schulte's double, and a pass to Holbrook. Kress fanned, then Walkup passed Linke. Kuhel bunted, but they nipped Linke at second. Stone's double cleared the bases except third, where Kuhel pulled up. Myer walked, filling the bases, but Travis dribbled a weak roller to second.

Washington scored again in the fourth, which Powell opened with a triple. Schulte's infield out scored him.

They scored again in the fifth, the work of Kuhel, who doubled, and Myer, who singled after Stone walked.

But Ed Coleman, of St. Louis, hit the bull's-eye—the bull's-eye on the roof in right center with one of Linke's fast balls. With Fay Thomas mowing down the Senators in order it proved sufficient.

Washington threatened to tie it up again in the ninth when Kuhel walked with two gone and moved to third on Stone's single, but Myer fanned.

Braves, Reds Split As Berger Is Star

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 16.—The Boston Braves turned the tide in the second game of a double-header here today and with a 15-hit batting spree defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 7-4, after losing the opener, 7-6.

Silas Johnson was winning pitcher for Cincinnati in the first game, although he was relieved by Brennan after the seventh when Mallon and Jordan each singled and scored on a hom run by Berger, who had a perfect day at bat in the second game with four hits in four times at bat.

Giants Defeat Cards in Hit-Fest

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Giants needed only one big inning, plus Carl Hubbell's ability to "bear down" in the pinches today, to trim the Cardinals for the second time, 7 to 3, and increase their lead over Pittsburgh to 5½ games and to 6 over St. Louis.

The league leaders opened with a brutal assault on "Fidgety" Phil Collins that netted 5 runs in the first inning, then coasted the rest of the distance. Hubbell was touched for 13 hits, one or more in every inning except the fourth and eighth, but had ten men left on the sacks as he pitched his way out of one tough spot after another.

Mel Ott's twelfth home run of the season, which broke his tie with Joe Moore for the league leadership, started the big opening rally. The hit came with two on base and left Collins wabbly when Hank Leiber came up a moment later and belted the first of his two home runs.

Anguished Effort at the Finish

seemed a ghost, with his white face, white body and black trunks and running shirt looking a little like an old-fashioned bathing suit, relieved only by a white "N-Z" with a fir tree emblem between the initials. Lovelock ran so close to Cunningham that he must have been breathing on his neck all the way.

It must be a terrifying sensation to turn it on in a race of that kind with the object of discouraging or killing off pursuers and finding that it doesn't work. Cunningham ran a fine second quarter and apparently a good third because, with the rest of the field more or less cooked, he got rid of Bonthrone, but there was no shaking the black specter.

It was rounding the last turn that Black Jack suddenly broke the even rhythm of his pattering and jerked alongside of Cunningham. He paused there a moment and looked at his opponent as though studying him for content of running. I studied him, too, and thought Cunningham's face was strained and that he was through. Evidently Lovelock saw the same thing because he moved off and set about running away from him with never a look backward.

Bonny was behind the two and when he, too, saw that Cunningham had no sprint to offer it was a tonic that prepared him to square an old score or two. He then turned it on and beat Cunningham home as the delighted Princetonians bawled their joy.

But the real and proudest winner of all the day was Old Pop.

Revolta Is Winner Of Western Open

Chick Evans, Chicago amateur, who won the Western Open in 1910, required 316 strokes, while Jock Hutchinson, sr., winner in 1920 and 1923, finished with 325.

Revolta won $500 for finishing in first place, Goggin, $300, and $200 went to Nelson for third. Goggin also collected $150 offered by South Bend merchants for the lowest 18-hole score.

He was one of only three golfers who bettered perfect figures during the entire tournament. Revolta did it yesterday with his 70 and Francis Schwartz, St. Louis professional, accomplished the feat when he led the field during the first round with 69. Schwartz, incidentally, blew completely after his sensational start and ended with 311.

Frank Wykoff Marvels at Ease Of Jesse Owens' Track Form

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Frank Wykoff, who was something of a sprinter in his own right as the record books show, marveled today at the ease with which Jesse Owens, Ohio State colored runner, belittles time and space.

Although Owens failed to nick the former University of Southern Californian's world record of 9.4 seconds for 100 yards yesterday before 40,000 persons, Frankie, who watched Owens win four events, admitted the midwestern Negro's ease of action had him baffled.

"I never saw a man run with such ease," said the veteran of two Olympic game appearances. "He doesn't appear to be running fast at all. He isn't half trying, yet he gets there first. Those strides of his are so short, and still it doesn't appear that he moves his legs fast."

Owens came from behind to win in the 100-yard, 220-yard and low hurdle races. Te threw in a couple of broad jumps for good measure and won that event, too, to give Ohio State four of its six first places in a dual meet in which Southern California won nine events.

One of the fastest starters in the sprint business, Wykoff indicated he believed Owens would have to improve his form coming off the the marks before he could do much about shattering the world's century record.

"I have to get my lead in the first 40 yards of the race," said Wykoff, "and then try and hold off my opponents. Owens appears too slow getting away now, but when he improves on that, look out, records."

Matches Start Sunday For District Tennis Title

With a banner field expected to participate, the District of Columbia Tennis Championships—the biggest local tournament of the year—will get under way next Sunday at the Columbia Country Club.

Entries in the men's singles and doubles are being accepted by Tom Frydell at the tennis house of the Club up until 5 p. m., Saturday.

Handicap Title Retained by Mel Kraft

PLAYING almost perfect golf on the back nine journey, Mel Kraft, defeated Lester Olian, 2 and 1, yesterday to make a successful defense of the Woodmont Country Club Spring Handicap championship.

Kraft, heavy favorite from the start, took an early lead on Olian, and shot the incoming nine in 36, one over par. He had a medal round of 76. Olian's handicap was nine and Kraft's seven.

Dr. Samuel Bogdonoff, with 90—15—75, and Gil Hahn, with 86—11—75, tied for first prize in the sweepstakes at Woodmont. Milt Abramson, 86—10—76, was second.

Maj. R. C. Jones and Mrs. Hume Peabody took top honors in the mixed Scotch foursome at Army and Navy. Their net was 151. Mrs. Peabody having 88—11—77 and Maj. Jones, 93—19—74.

Second prize went to Maj. and Mrs. George Rice, who had 71—82—153. Tied for third were Capt. and Mrs. E. H. Levy, who had 76—80—156, and Maj. and Mrs. J. A. Rogers, with 73—83—156. The low gross prize went to Maj. and Mrs. R. T. Pendleton, who scored 180.

Maj. C. M. Beck and Maj. W. O. Burress, with 61s, tied for the Class A ringer tournament prize at Army and Navy. The tournament ended yesterday. R. T. Pendleton, with 64, and R. P. Saunders, 66, were first and second, respectively in Class B.

George P. Richards, with 80; F. E. Berkeley, with 79, and G. H. Schultz, with 80, tied for first prize in the Donal L. Chamberlin match play against par tournament at Kenwood. They will play off next week.

With 32 teams competing, Mrs. W. R. Bush and 17-year-old Billy Dettweiler took the gross prize with 85 in the mixed Scotch foursome at Congressional. Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Elbele, 92-17½—74½, won first low net; Mrs. Folsom Jones and H. Powell, 93-17½—75½, were second; Mrs. H. Powell and J. F. Dowdell, and Mrs. H. A. Knox and Billy Shea were other winners.

The following were winners in the poker-hand golf competition: Mrs. A. M. Hyler and Dr. Bob Keilty; Mrs. Dan L. Moorman and C. T. Penn and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kennedy.

Harry Pitt, former club champion, and Bill Harvey, favorites, defeated J. R. Patteson and Mack Myers, 2 up, to roll into the third round of the two-man team championship at Manor. Other results follow:

Ralph Gibson and L. N. Whitten defeated George McGehee and W. L. Lacy, 3 and 2; R. A. Tullison and A. J. McNamee defeated W. E. Richardson and W. W. England, 4 and 2; R. R. Reash and M. S. Brown defeated Tom Beavers and A. L. Alderman, 2 up; E. F. Knapp and W. L. Jones defeated Lieut. L. K. Rice and J. C. Putman, 2 and 1.

Dave Thomson and Tommy Bones defeated J. E. Neil and J. W. Cramer, 4 and 2; B. S. Beall and C. A. Metzler defeated O. Emerson Moore and H. G. Wood, 1 up, 21 holes; W. E. Gemmell and P. B. Patteson defeated A. G. Landrus and C. F. Medley, 3 and 2.

Crowd Watches CCC Boxing Eliminations

Harrisonburg, Va., June 16.—More than 700 fans saw the CCC district elimination boxing bouts at the new Shenandoah Live Stock Sales, Inc., arena here last night and they were rewarded with some real fights.

Camps 2, 9 and 10 shared honors, each carrying off two victories. King, 180 pounds, Camp 10, won the heavyweight preliminary from Kearney, Camp 9, and then took the final from Leonard, who weighed only 150 pounds.

Par Is Broken In Dixie Golf Practice

F. Haas, Defending Titlist, Holds Record Over Richmond Links.

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

RICHMOND, Va., June 16.—Sounding another fair warning that he is ready for all challengers, gangling Fred Haas, jr., the 19-year-old defending champion from New Orleans, today cracked par for the second straight time as several dozen competitors indulged in practice rounds for the Southern amateur golf championship.

Spanking out another 71, one under par, to equal the unofficial amateur course record he set yesterday over the revised James River layout of the Country Club of Virginia, Haas was low scorer in a foursome that included a trio of his sturdiest rivals, Sam Perry, Birmingham; Morton McCarthy, Norfolk, and Billy Howell, Richmond.

Not to Qualify.

The Louisiana State University sophomore, who won the Southern title his first time out a year ago at New Orleans, kept step with perfect figures on the way out and steamed home one under, still the only entrant who has bettered orthodox figures. While his contenders are battling through the 36-hole qualifying rounds Tuesday and Wednesday, Haas will be casually perfecting his game, for he said today he would take advantage of his option of taking the No. 1 position in the match-play bracket without qualification.

Even with his fine round today, Haas was just a single shot lower than the veteran Sam Perry, twice-winner of the tournament, runner-up a year ago and looked upon today as Haas' most dangerous threatener. After going out in 37, Perry fashioned a sub-par 35 coming in. McCarthy, who yesterday won the Middle Atlantic championship at Virginia Beach, and Howell reported 75s, with Howell carving a 35 coming home to reach that score.

Heat Hurts Scores.

Earl Stokes, of Louisville, runner-up in 1933, was another of the early arrivals. Playing along easily and admittedly stymied by the terrific heat, Stokes reported an approximate 77, as did Dan Sage, jr., of Atlanta.

More than 100 entrants were registered tonight, with indications that probably 150 would tee off for the first round of the qualifying test Tuesday. The course was in fine shape and met the approval of virtually all the players.

"This is the finest course over which the Southern has ever been held," Perry said. Most figured it somewhat harder than last year's venue at the New Orleans Country Club because pitches are required to all the greens and run-up shots are taboo.

THE pennant-bound Ballston A.C. stretched its winning streak to seven straight games in the Northern Virginia League yesterday by defeating the Herndon club for the second time this season, 9 to 4. The Ballstonians increased their lead in the White Section to three full games as Manassas bowed before the air-tight pitching and timely hitting of Rhodney Furr, of Middleburg, and lost, 3-2. In another fine pitching performance, Elmer Wesly shut out Falls Church with one hit as the Arlington team came through in the pinch to win, 4 to 0.

Purcellville halted the advance of Fairfax Station for Post Association honors in the Red Section by winning in a passive manner, 8 to 7, as Pitcher Al Mahoney forced in the decisive run in the eighth inning. Purcellville and Marshall are now tied for second place following Marshall's 7-6 upset over Vienna, effected chiefly by the hitting of Ball and Dunn. In the other sectional combat Pitcher Duvall granted only five hits as Millwood trimmed Aldie, 11 to 4.

Ballston looked the part of a championship team yesterday against Herndon. Its "murderers' row" of McQuinn, Miller, Tonker, Biggs and Harvey backed up Lem Owen's effective hurling with a 16-hit assault, featured by McQuinn's home run with the bases filled in the sixth. "Wally" Lynn and Furr each socked out three hits in the Manassas-Middleburg fray, while Russell and Snoots were conspicuous in Arlington's attack.

The Arlington club lost the services of Jack Wallace, who broke his leg in the third inning, sliding into third base. Wallace was removed to Emergency Hospital in Washington and was later returned to his home.

Clarksburg Man Gets Ace on 212-Yard Hole

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 16.—Lawrence Souders, young Clarksburg merchant, has entered the golfing hall of fame, making a hole in 1.

Souders whammed the ball down the 212-yard No. 2 hole at the Clarksburg Country Club course and into the cup to join the exclusive circle of golfers. The ball hit on the green, bounded to within 3 feet of the cup and rolled in.

Night Ball Started In the Shenandoah

1st Game at Harrisonburg Set Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 16.—The Shenandoah Valley's first night baseball game will be staged here Tuesday with Staunton engaging in a Valley League contest. Local club officials are planning elaborate ceremonies for the event and expect more than 2,000 fans to view the novelty here.

Nocturnal games were to have been inaugurated here tonight with Culpeper, but the equipment was not completed in time. The eight 80-foot poles were erected yesterday and the lighting fixtures will be put in place Monday. The local club has invested more than $3,000 in the equipment.

THE Washington Clowns are back in the thick of the pennant fight for The Post Association title in the Maryland County League, boasting a 5-2 victory over the hitherto unbeaten Cabin John team yesterday on the latter's field. The North Washington hitters unloosened a belated assault upon Pitcher Gilbert, of Mount Rainier, in the last two innings to score ten times and eventually win out by a 17-9 score.

Mike Mehalic and Harry Colliflower collaborated to give the Clowns the decision over Cabin John. Mehalic pitched a beautiful game of ball, scattering the seven opposing hits with the minimum of danger. Colliflower delivered in the pinch with two timely clouts, and played a bang-up game at shortstop. He handled eight chances in flawless fashion, and cut off three incipient rallies.

Clarke, Harrington and Plumber were the leaders in North Washington's slugfest against Mount Rainier.

Hagerstown Poloists Defeat Fort Belvoir

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 16.—The Washington County polo club today turned in its second victory of the week against the United States Army Engineers team of Fort Belvoir, Va., at Tenton field, 9 to 6. The Engineers had a one-goal handicap. Fifteen hundred persons witnessed the game which was spirited throughout. W. D. Byron and D. V. Jamison, for the locals, and Maj. McCulam for the visitors led the scoring with three goals each. Ed Mason for the locals made a sensational goal in the final chukker to clinch victory.

Lampson Trophy Won By Leasure at Argyle

William C. Leasure won the Lampson trophy yesterday at Argyle Golf Club shooting a 79-10, 69. Leasure teed off having to beat the defending titleholder, Ray Lawrensen, who turned in a net 71. He played the first 7 holes in 1 under par, went 6 over from the ninth through the eleventh and rallied to finish with a 79. It was his initial tournament victory.

Waynesboro Takes 4th In Row

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WAYNESBORO, Va., June 16.—Waynesboro Valley Leaguers collected their fourth consecutive win before 1,200 fans today, defeating Orange, 3 to 1. The locals bunched eight hits off Ty Tisdale, young Hargrave Military Academy hurler, while Bugs Bear, leading pitcher in the Augusta League last year, kept nine safeties by Orange well-scattered.

Orange scored in the second when Harper and Lohr doubled. Waynesboro's three runs came in the sixth as result of singles by Steele, Crawford and Connell, and two errors which occurred in the excitement of a double steal. Benny Kessler, speedy Orange second sacker, was carried from the field in fifth with a sprained ankle sustained sliding into third.

Charlottesville, Va., June 16.—Front Royal's Valley League team collected 14 hits off Edelen to win from Charlottesville here today, 8 to 5. Huffman led the attack with 4 hits, including two doubles. Close on his heels was Baker, with 3 hits, one a two-bagger.

Cassel, on the mound for Front Royal, kept seven hits well scattered except in the eighth, when the locals registered three runs on as many singles.

The locals completed three double plays, which aided in keeping down the score.

Culpeper, Va., June 16.—Culpeper Athletic Club took its fourth straight victory in as many starts in the Valley League, defeating the Heurich Brewers here this afternoon by the score of 6 to 4. Both Beall and Watt allowed one hit up to the fifth inning. The visitors got two hits for two runs in the fifth and four hits for two runs in the sixth. The local club did not score until the seventh, when a walk and a home run by Beall put two markers across, and in the eighth five hits, in which was included a homer by Lacey, accounted for four runs. Metheney, Beall and April led in hitting, getting two each. Beall outpitched Watt, striking out seven and allowing no passes, while his opponent walked two and struck out four. Culpeper defeated Harrisonburg, with Hash in the box, by a score of 9 to 2, yesterday.

Chesapeake Beats Portsmouth Again

Only 28 Men Face Greene in 5-1 Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., June 16.—Bad breaks robbed June Greene of a perfect game here today when Chesapeake defeated the Portsmouth Navy Yard team by the score of 5 to 1. Only 28 men faced the big right-hander, the side being retired in order for eight frames. In the fourth Howard made a fluke double when three Chesapeake players let a ball fall between them. Bunting then singled to center and Bangs hit into a double play, Howard scoring from third. From then on Greene was invincible, retiring 13 men in order. Chesapeake scored two in the third on Gwathmey's single and Coffee's fielder's choice.

They scored three more in the fifth when Coffee singled to score Price. Wolfe sent Greene home on a fielder's choice and Gwathmey scored when the Navy Yard catcher, Sykes, tried to catch Tom Wolfe stealing second. Chesapeake made but five hits, Gwathmey getting two, while Waddey Stewart got a double.

Charles Town Race Track, June 16.

Dear Al:

The Jockeys-Who-Have-Been-Suspended A. C. now has 17 players and needs only one more eligible before it will be able to stage a game of its own. There were three additions yesterday. Les Garrett will be available for five days and Charley Quattlebaum and Aloysius (Dusky) Williams are ready for the rest of the meeting. Williams will not be allowed to play on the regular team, however. He was found with a battery in the jockeys' room which officials said he had intended to use on Rube Samuelson in yesterday's seventh race. I have assigned Williams to run the electric scoreboard at all the team's games. A colored fellow came in the press box yesterday and one of the boys picked up the ruling on Williams. He handed it to the ebony visitor and asked, "Did you see this?" He looked at the paper, "No. suh, I ain't seen this. What's this? A battery—let me outa here!" And he went flying toward the paddock. I may be wrong but I was just wondering if this colored fellow wasn't rushing down to get his bet off Rube Samuelson. I said, I was just wondering. BILL.

First race—Peace Treaty, a brisk worker, seems to have found a field that he can master in this. Eddie Smith is slated to ride and I'm stringing along. Edie has speed and could be second. Lone Miss, if sent back, would be a factor, but she appeared a trifle sore yesterday.

Second race—Lady Spy and Aimjo, coupled, should gain another purse for the Bond forces in this sprint. Both are at top shape. Berry Patch and Baggage Trail for the other awards.

Third race—This is a wide-open race that may suit the purpose of Mere Wave. This one has a recent victory that revealed good speed. First Regiment has drilled in good fashion and could awake. Sambo G. wins occasionally and could be dangerous here on best form.

Fourth race—Aella is the speed of the party and Hilley will do the saddle honors. I see no reason for mistakes. Tuleyries Wand and Peggy Can to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Star Queen is entrusted to the guiding of Eddie Smith again and this one should add another set of brackets. Canteret should go well in this field. Red Riot is moving up but packs enough speed to be a keen factor.

Sixth race—Corner Boy found Worthington too hard a nut to crack here last Friday. Meets only a fair sort of opposition tomorrow. Flit Out won by beating the gate out of No. 1 stall. Has that same post tomorrow and may surprise. Goantell, a winner here, should take part of the money.

Seventh race—Porphyry has been threatening of late and deserves a chance to take this sort of company. I'm depending on Shanks for a good ride. Busy Master's last was a fine effort. Royal Lassie is a possible surprise. Spero would move into the picture in the mud.

Eighth race—(Substitute). On a lightning-fast track Rocky Spray would have a fighting chance to get home ahead of these. Jinnee and Miss Cyllene for the place and show.

Sylvan Theater Opens Season On Wednesday

'The Mikado' Will Be First of 18 Events Planned for Summer.

With a performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" the Community Center Department will open its 1935 Summer Festivals program Wednesday night in the National Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument.

This operetta, presented by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group, will be the first of 18 events which Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the department, is planning for June, July, August and early September. Final action on the complete program will be taken at a meeting tomorrow morning in the board room of the Franklin Administration Building when Mrs. Peeples and C. Marshall Finnan, director of the National Capital Parks, will meet with Frederic A. Delano, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Albert Clyde Burton, Miss Edith Grosvenor, Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, Mrs. Edith H. Hunter, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Curtis A. Hodges, Isaac Ganz, Col. E. R. Mattice, Capt. P. J. Carroll and Harold Snyder.

As has been the custom since the summer festivities programs were launched seven years ago, the service bands will augment the presentations with concerts preceding the programs, which start at 8 p. m.

This year, in addition to the popularly priced 25-cent chairs, there will be sold a limited number of reserved seats at 50 cents, Mrs. Peeples announced yesterday. In the event of rain performances will be postponed until the following night.

Indians Reject Self-Rule.

Pendleton, Oreg., June 16 (AP).—The Umatilla tribe of Indians has turned thumbs down on the Wheeler-Howard proposal for a new form of self-government. The vote, cast yesterday, was 305 against and 159 for the measure.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

5 MILES AWAY IS A HOT, DRY DESERT!
TO DISCUSS LIQUOR IS TO DRINK IT!
Tom Cribb—world heavyweight champion—CHALLENGED ALL COMERS FOR 11 YEARS WITHOUT GETTING A SINGLE BOUT

STAR APPLE
APPLE OF SODOM

Tom Cribb first came into fistic prominence when in 1807 he stepped forward to claim the heavyweight title after Henry Pearce. Cribb fought One-eye Belcher, former champion, to a finish in 41 rounds—and fought battle after battle for the next four years, stopping all contenders—and in 1811 he suddenly ran out of opponents. In spite of the fact that he had a standing challenge to fight any man in the world, he went without a fight for 11 years and retired undefeated in 1822 when he was 41 years old.

Strange as it seems, hot and dry desert country is close neighbor to land drenched by some of the heaviest rain in the world. This strange, natural wonder takes place on the island of Kauai, in the Hawaiian group, where topographical and atmospheric conditions combine to drench one part of the island and parch another part 5 miles away.

A high cliff faces the incoming trade winds, forces them upward, and causes them to precipitate their moisture. Here the rainfall is about 40 feet a year. On the other side of the slope the moistureless winds coast down and sweep across dry desert country.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Little Jimmy and the Three Baers.

This is the story of the Plodding Parent and the Three Baers, Ring, "Mike" and Cinema. Once upon a time, children, the Three Baers lived in the deep forests and were supposed to be very savage. They were said to eat giants and swallow stevedores. They had to have raw meat. But if they couldn't get it they would take radio or movie contracts.

• • • •

They went "woof! woof!" and were pretty ferocious. All the children were very much afraid of them. The Three Baers would point to the bones of a huge pachyderm called Carnera and of a German tourist called Herr Schmeling and everybody would run home buckety-buckety.

• • • •

One day the Three Baers met a little stevedore whose name was Jimmy. Jimmy had heard of the Three Baers, Ring, "Mike" and Cinema. "You keep away from them or you will be gobbled up all in one gulp," Jimmy was warned. "Oooh!" exclaimed most of the experts.

Now it came to pass that Little Jimmy was no wild animal trainer, but he had seen Adgie's lions without blinking, and he had never swooned at the Franck Buck "Bring 'Em Back Alive" pictures. Little Jimmy had never led a sheltered life and he had been through so much that it took a lot to intimidate him. Jimmy, in fact, had been up against a relief bureau. And if those relief bureau workers can't intimidate you and make you feel infinitesimal and futile, nothing in the world can.

• • • •

Little Jimmy had never been to Hollywood. He thought Clark Gable was some part of a roof. He had listened to the radio but there was nothing about Jimmy that would have been convincing even on Maj. Bowes' amateur hour.

• • • •

One night Little Jimmy found himself in the woods face to face with the Three Baers without knowing how it had come about. But lo and behold, when Little Jimmy rubbed his eyes and looked again there were only Two Baers, "Mike" and Cinema. There was no trace of Ring (Woof Woof) Baer anywhere. It was apparent that what he was fighting was a composite picture of Chevalier, Ben Bernie and Public Comedian Number One.

• • • •

Little Jimmy was bewildered but not seriously disturbed. It was just Father's Day in the haunted forest, with not an inch of relief roll red tape anywhere. It was enough to mystify anybody, but Jimmy just waded in and did his best. And the next thing he knew he was in a pumpkin drawn by 12 white horses. And sitting beside him was the Fairy Princess known as Wotta Break, who said, "Home, James! You're the heavyweight champion of the world. And won't you bring the babies some ice cream?"

• • • •

"What do I do with the slipper and on what beanstalk?" asked Jimmy, a little dazed by the whole experience.

"You've got your fairy tales all mixed up," said the Princess.

• • • •

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Landlords — By Harry J. Tuthill

Our roomer! Ours! What a dippy situation.
My sister breaking into our house.... renting one of the rooms, so she and Gus could give a party for their low-brow friends.
Legally, I'm positive, this Count Salamander has us by the whiskers.
You mean we can't do anything about getting up in the middle of the night for a drink of water and finding that man prowling through this house?
Legally, a roomer has to stay in his room... I think.
On the other hand, where a roomer can show a receipt, you have to give him 30 days notice before throwing him downstairs. Also....
Oh, don't talk to me about "law." In 30 days Gus and Ollie and "our" roomer will be away from here exactly one month.

Byrd to Speak On 4th of July

Concert, Fireworks and Parade Planned at Monument.

Patriotic exercises at which Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia, will be orator, were announced yesterday by the Citizens' Committee, headed by C. Melvin Sharpe, as the headlining event for Washington's Fourth of July celebration.

Music by the United States Marine Band, a procession of flags and fireworks are other features of the celebration already planned, and Col. Edwin A. Halsey will repeat his last year's contribution to the program by reading the Declaration of Independence.

Col. John W. Oehmann is chairman and Col. Peyton G. Nevitt vice chairman of the military, patriotic and veterans cooperation committee. The fireworks committee is headed by Edgar Norris. The advance public ticket sale for chairs is in charge of Harold L. Haydon, with Maj. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., as vice chairman.

With plans for the event, the committee announced a proclamation issued by the District of Columbia Commissioners. The proclamation calls for full public participation in the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

On the 'Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

There's many a slip twixt the announcer and the air. Here are some of Columbian men's pet boners—in case you didn't hear them yourself.

Long experience and good intentions are no help when they are confronted with a name like Krzyzanowski. But ever since Andre Baruch, announced the Marine Roof of the Hotel Bossert in Brooklyn as "Maroon Reef" and Harry Von Zell referred to a former President as "Hoobert Herver," these lingual gentlemen know that simple words may be the greatest stumbling blocks.

David Ross, veteran announcer and Academy of Arts and Sciences 1932 diction winner, recalls a merry "bitamin V" for "vitamin B." With the Latin tenor waiting to go on he once piped "Tito Guitar and his romantic guizar." "Musicianship" frightens him; he hopes he will never have to say Popocatepetl.

Carlyle Stevens, winner of the BBDO diction award, hesitates at "guest artists" and never again wants to see a line beginning "These analysts' statistics." Seems he has difficulty with "st" followed by "s."

Bill Brenton's prize boners was a twist of "theme signature." He said "seme thignature," caught himself and repeated "Er—no, I mean seme thignature" decided to let it ride. Another time he expounded the virtues of a certain kind of bread when eaten with a "call, tool glass of milk."

Margaret Speaks, soprano on WRC, 7:30 p. m.

First concert of a Brahms Festival from the University of California (Berkeley) campus, to be heard on consecutive Mondays at 7:30 p. m. Tonight the composer's F major String Quintet is played, but, since it is not carried locally, try WJZ, New York.

Phil Duey, barytone, guest with the Gypsies, WRC, 8:30 p. m.

Art Dickson, barytone, is guest of Pick and Pat, WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

Margaret McCravy, winner of the Duchin contest, soloist on Godfrey's Gazette, Singing Violins and many other WJSV features, has gone home. Where "home" may be and the reasons for her trip are not revealed. Meanwhile Godfrey presents his new soloist, Betty Beauchamp. Betty was first heard on the Post's first series, "The Parade of Youth" on WJSV, and showed considerable promise. Her audition in the Duchin contest attracted attention of the judges and we hope to hear more about her now that Godfrey has taken her under his wing.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Loren Hall

Batting for Morgan Baker.

DECLARING the five day work week to be a major objective of organized labor, Miss Esther Penn, national secretary, A. F. G. E., urged its adoption not only for industry, but for the Government service proper in an address before delegates of the District Department.

Explaining her position Miss Penn said:

"Unquestionably, the immediate establishment of a five-day work week in the Government service would go a long way toward making possible a five-day work week in private industry, regardless of all other factors. There can be no question but the Government has the right to determine this matter, on behalf of its own employes, and there are, today, approximately 750,000 of them. No question of 'constitutionality' would be involved here, and the Supreme Court certainly would not deny that the Federal Government has the right to establish new, and better standards of living and working for its own empolyes."

Miss Penn further declared: "I am firmly of the opinion that the Federal Government, itself, should initiate the five-day work week, and urge that steps be taken to bring this matter to the attention of the President and the Congress."

Out of 270 who took noncompetitive examinations for junior auditors, Washington unit, Income Tax Division, Internal, Revenue, 77 passed and 48 failed, with 145 papers yet to be graded. Those appointed will serve as revenue agents in the field, with minimum salary of $2,600 a year. There are approximately 100 places in the Income Tax Division to be filled.

To Give Play.

The New Theater Group, composed mainly of Government employes, and managed by Morris Weissberg (F), Civil Service Commission, will present "Waiting for Lefty" Wednesday and Thursday nights at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest.

This play, which has received high approval and recommendation by the New York critics, is the initial attempt of the New Theater Group, although its members are by no means amateur performers.

The group and play are being sponsored by Representatives Almlee and Schneider, of Wisconsin; Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Marcantonio, of New York. Representative Marcantonio will speak at the presentation of the play. In addition to the play, other entertainment will be provided.

Tickets may be obtained at Brentano's.

A charter, or approved organization certificates, has been granted for the Smithsonian Institution Federal Credit Union, and steps are now being taken toward organizing the union. A meeting has been called for Tuesday for the purpose of electing a board of directors, a credit committee, and a supervisory committee, all to serve until the first annual election the third Tuesday in January, 1936. Herbert S. Bryant (C), National Museum, is temporary chairman.

Lawrence Roberts, jr., Technical Division, FHA, has gone to Sea Island, Ga., where he will spend two weeks' vacation.

THE general appendix of the latest report of the Smithsonian Institution, just published, the object of which is to present brief accounts of scientific discovery in particular directions and memoirs of a general character, contains the following articles by Government scientists:

"How the Sun Warms the Earth," and "The Contents of Interstellar Space," by Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary, Smithsonian Institution.

"Romance or Science," by Dr. Paul R. Heyl, Bureau of Standards.

"A Geologist's Paradise," by Dr. Ray S. Bassler, National Museum.

"The Microscopic Plant and Animal World in Ultraviolet Light," by Dr. Florence E. Meier, Smithsonian Institution.

"The History of an Insect's Abdomen," by Dr. R. E. Snodgrass, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine.

"Ticks and the Role They Play in the Transmission of Disease," by Dr. F. C. Bishopp, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine.

"The Forehead," by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, National Museum.

"Archeology of the Bering Sea Region," by Henry B. Collins, jr., National Museum.

Celebrating the approaching marriage of Miss Florence E. Magne (P), her associates in the U. S. Attorney's office, gave a luncheon in her honor at the Madrillon Restaurant. Miss Magne will wed Michael L. Gatti the latter part of the month. Those attending the luncheon were Mrs. Leroy Weber, Mrs. Lyle T. Newton, Mrs. William Copp, Mrs. J. Maynard Magruder, Miss Ethel A. Braswell, Miss Margaret V. Carr, Miss Louise N. Royall, Miss Eloise M. Reese and Miss Ruth M. Rauch, all of the attorney's office.

Culbertson on Bridge

Pride in Victory.

In offering my readers a variety of hands played among expert and good players, I find the prevailing tendency lies in playing contracts of notrump. As everyone knows, the notrump contracts are much harder of fulfillment than suit contracts and psychologically, players of skill find great satisfaction in the fulfillment of the more difficult contracts.

West, dealer
North-South vulnerable

	♠ A K J 3 2 ♡ 7 5 ◇ K 7 6 ♣ A 8 4

	♠ 7 5 ♡ A 10 8 4 ◇ Q 10 3 ♣ K Q 6 3

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
1♡	1♠(1)	Pass(2)	1NT
2◇	2♠(3)	Pass(4)	2NT
Pass	3NT	Pass	Pass

1—North has a choice between bidding one spade and making a takeout double.

2—Many players will make a penalty double of the one-spade bid with about this strength. But experience shows the double to be usually a blank cartridge.

3—North seeks a way of showing South that he has rebid values. An assist of the notrump bid on a single diamond stopper seems inferior to the simple spade rebid.

4—And now a double would be dangerous, because it might induce West to double a notrump contract by South on the assumption that East can win two or three tricks.

The Play.

West opened the King of hearts, which was allowed to hold. He continued with the Jack of hearts and again all other hands played low. He shifted to the ten of spades and North won with the Ace.

Declarer saw that the precise plan for the development of the hand depended upon the adverse patterns. In an effort to get a count on the West hand he cashed the King and Ace of clubs. Since West followed to both rounds it was possible to mark his pattern within one card. If he held any single black card it was a spade, and the remainder of his entire hand was red. Declarer took stock of his tricks—three clubs, two spades, one heart and one establishable diamond. He would have to develop two more tricks.

The next lead was the six of diamonds, on which South played the Queen. The point of this lead was that in order to prevent the development of two diamond tricks by straight leads West would have to win with the Ace. But if he were completely bailed out of black cards, West would have to give declarer an extra trick in one red suit or the other by his return lead.

Declarer would have liked to cash the King of spades in order to be sure of stripping West to red cards. But he could not afford this play, as he saw he would have to depend on his major spade tenace for the ninth trick.

West won the diamond Queen with the Ace and took his best chance on the return by leading the diamond Jack, hoping to drop the ten. North won with the King, and a third round of the suit to the ten-spot put South in to cash the Ace of hearts. South continued with the Queen of clubs, and the fourth round of clubs stuck East in the lead. East was compelled to lead into the King-Jack of spades, giving South nine tricks.

Judging the Stars
A New Type of Radio Program for Washingtonians
CONFINED EXCLUSIVELY TO PROFESSIONAL RADIO AND STAGE TALENT
EACH Monday night for the next thirteen weeks, the makers of Gunther's Beer will open the doors to fame and fortune, for Washington's professional stage and radio entertainers who have never gotten a real "break".
At the conclusion of each night's broadcast, studio judges will select the outstanding STAR of the program by rounds of applause. But, we want you, the public, to let us know whether or not you agree with the judges' decisions. If you don't agree write the name of the STAR you would have selected on a post-card and mail it to Station WRC. Your VOTE means a lot to these entertainers. It may change failure to success. It may help to put the right STAR on the road to fame. These STARS need your opinion to help them climb the ladder of success. Opportunity awaits the winners on September 9th. Tune in tonight on WRC at 10 for an entertaining half hour of pleasure. Hear what GUNTHER'S offers Washington's professional talent
As the Public VOTES .. so shall the STARS REAP
